BL infiltrators' 'battle plan' nearly succeeded

British Leyland yesterday disclosed a document said to come from the far-left Socialist League, giving details of how the company's car plant at Cowley, Oxfordshire, was to be infiltrated and why it was considered important to do so. The document, handed to BL management by concerned workers, was described by an

The conspiracy plan which it describes appears to have been followed closely, judging by the disclosures which accompanied the dismissal earlier this week of 13 Cowley "activists" for giving false information on their job application forms.

Although the document does not spell out the purpose of the proposed infiltration, it makes clear the strategic role of BL within British industry and the importance to BL of Cowley and its new Maestro.

"The size of the plant, the importance of BL and the general lack of opportunity in arge cars/engineering plants means that we must go all out to get comrades in ", the documents says.

TUC talks with Tebbit next week

By Paul Routledge Labour Editor

TUC has quietly dropped its 18-month boycott of contacts with Mr Norman Tebbit, the Secretary of State for Employment, in a move expected to infuriate hard-Left critics of the Labour movement's "new mood of realism".

A full formight before the annual Trades Union Congress debates whether to ban discussions with the Minister on lahour law reform, union leaders will see Mr Tebbit on two successive days next week.

document The following is the docu-ment handed to BL management by workers concerned about left-wing infiltration at the Cowley car plant. It was written on a single foolscap sheet headed "Jobs Special."

BL's Cowley plant at Oxford is recruiting now for the autumn of the interpretation of the LM10 in the spring of next year. A launch requires 10,000 to 20,000 cars "in the field" on the launch date. So from September BL will be taking on labour to prepare for this: world; and Greenbank - retaining physically handicapped people with the help of seven allocated 45 per cent of all the money coming to Britain from the European Social Fund. on labour to prepare for this:

The LM10 (the new Maestro) the first of a range of cars between the Motro and the luxury car bracket. It is central to BL's future plans. The number of people that will be recruited will be in the region of 1.000 to 1.400. This must be seen or 1,000 to 1,400. It is must be seen as a clear priority for the organization. The size of the plant, the importance of BL, and the general lack of opportunity in large cars/engineering plants means that we must go all out to get cdes [understood to mean comrades] in.

much help as it can get to provide more jobs. "I have worked with one of Any local tendency to say that this disrupts the branch/district etc must be opposed. Every branch organizer should discuss with memployed and white collar edes the scheme organizers for two years to get the EEC to accept their application and now we

with a view to getting them to apply.

Cdes in non-prioritized jobs should also be discussed with - this should include LT cdes.

From the centre cdes Baker and Blanca will be leading this project and applying for jobs. Other full-time cdes will be discussed with. Reports from the plant indicate that The minister added that work by the British Standards Institution to develop a standard for reducing spray from heavy lorries was nearly complete and draft regulations would be sent BL will be recruiting women in this wave so from that point of view also this is a major opportunity for us. Cdes will need a job background of unskilled/semi-skilled work, not Her announcement was welcomed by the Freight Transport necessarily in engineering, covering the last five years. They will also need an address in Oxford.

If references are outside Oxford. If references are outside Oxford, they will need a cover story to explain why they are now in Oxford or seeking to move to Oxford. None of this presents any problem. The main problem will be persuading cdes to change jobs and to move to Oxford. This applies particularly to the London branches. Conference decisions on this point are quite clear.

We have a disproportionate number of cdes in London, and one of the objectives of the turn is to correct this. Cowley openings will allow edes to move directly into relatively well-paid jobs in a key

Recruitment will start next Wednesday and we expect that there will be a large number of applicants. We need as many cdes as possible in Oxford on that day and the two days after to go to the Job-Centre and apply. Branches must allocate the necessary resources to ensure that edes can get 10 Oxford. This is a collective responsibility. The edes who have got jobs in Cowley will be available on Tuesday to bein coes with interviews, etc. As many as possible should be in Oxford on Tuesday. The Oxford branch and the centre will have edes there to help. Cdes going to Oxford should contact the national contro (Baker, McDermott, Hanks and Pullford) or the Oxford br. [Telephone number deleted by the The Times]. Codes coming to Oxford should go to 26 Bullingdon Road.

BL has been under pressure because of its discriminatory recruitment last time. They are now asking people in the plant if they have any female relatives who want jobs. So it could be the case that women cdes have a proportionately hetter chance than men. For this reason and because of the obvious gain for the organization, women cdes should apply. [The given are understood to codenames.]

Noraid man fined for rioting in Belfast From Richard Ford

A young American from the Noraid delegation to Ulster was fined £100 and threatened with deportation yesterday after being found guilty of riotous behaviour in west Belfast.

The magistrate, Mr Basil McIvor, told Stephen Lich, aged 22. a stock manager, from Indianapolis, who denied the charge, that he had abused his freedom to come to Northern Ireland by taking part in disorders.

He had encouraged a lot of misguided youngsters to disturb the police and destroy property in their own community which not only endangered lives and liberty but the fabric of their own community, Mr McIvor

"Your presence and participation in this riot as a citizen of the United States may also on this occasion have had a specific, perhaps considerable influence on an already sensi-tized section of the community, leading youngsters to believe that international opinion or a substantial part of international opinion is behind their violent and criminal activities", the magistrate said.

He added: "I think you are misguided and I think the court is expressing the wishes of the vast majority of men, women and youngsters from the comm unity who hope for peace and who long for better oppor-tunities for employment in their own homeland.

"You will leave here at the earliest possible moment and if you do not voluntarily leave here I have the power to recommend that you be deported and that you do not come back", said Mr McIvor.

job creation aid provides a shopping delivery service for the housebound employing 10 mentally handicapped people and three staff for £71,000; a Toxieth group

City refuses EEC

Liverpool City Council has rejected about £350,000 of EEC aid for four job creation schemes. The Labour council leaders, who have passed a £300m regeneration scheme for the city, which has 19 per cent unemployment, say they would rather use their money on their own projects than contribute to the four schemes.

The schemes would have cost about £700.000 but the EEC would have paid half the bill. Central government would have provided three-quarters of the balance. Organizers of the schemes had applied for help from the European Social Fund, and were told the money was available if the council agreed. But at a special meeting of the city's joint economic development, housing and building councillors committees, Judge Baker, QC, has presided over three country court cases involving disputes between Mr Brian Brook, a farmer, and Mr Ron Mallinson, a smallholder.

Tories back GLC over green belt By a Staff Reporter

Government's Proposals for new guidelines on development within London's green belt have ran into new criticism, this time from Conservatives on the Greater London Council.

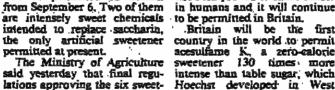

While the Government will not have been surprised by the attack on its plans from the Labour-controlled administration at the GLC, its announcement appears to have almost equally alarmed the opposition, Conservative whose planning spokesman, Mrs Joan Wkkes, arged extreme vigilance to protect the future of the green belt. It was recognized that there might be small pockets of land which could be released for housing, but "the essential objective must be to protect London from thjis encroachment", she said.

"The green belt is paramount to London's environmental well-being."

A High Court judge was told yesterday that British Rail became the victim of a "sting" when most of a 42,000 sq ft former parcels office which it leased out in Sunderland vanished and some of it reappeared

The building, which would cost £300,000 to reinstate, had been leased from BR for £6,000

Then, in what Mr Justice Falcoper described as "an amazing story," most of the building was dismantled and

Part of it turned up, reerected, on a farm 60 miles away at Robin Hood's Bay.

North Yorkshire, Mr Timothy lennings, counsel for BR said He said that the premises, in Robinson Terrace, Hendon, Sunderland, were leased from British Rail in May by Mr Kenneth Burrell, of Ford Oval, Sunderland. The Judge, who had been shown "before and after" photographs of the site, granted BR a temporary injunction banning any more demolition work or removal of materials from the site pending a further court hearing.

Cafe Blue near Biggleswade, Bedfordshire, believes she was the first to serve grouse in the South last year, upstaging the West End hotels. Yesterday was not so glorious; by lunchtime she had bagged a good 12 brace of ladies and gentlemen from the press, but not a grouse was to be had. "It's such a shame", she said.

However drivers who had hoped to have grouse, chips, baked beans and bread and butter followed by pudding and a mug of tea for £1.50, hardly turned their noses up at Mrs Clark's substitute, fresh Scouch salmon at the same price.

The regrettable absence of the Red Grouse was explained by Mr Edwin Cheeseman, manager of the Park Hotel in Bedford, who planned the operation. "They just have not shot anything", he said of the guns he was depending on, combing moors south of Edinburgh. Mrs Clark never really stood a chance against the motorcycles, helicoptrs, light aircraft and, in one case, Asion Martin's turbo-charged Tickford Capri used to rush the birds from scotland to the West End. The race between three big hotel groups. Trust House Forte, Thistle Hotels and Stakis Hotels ended in a close finish.

The first grouse reached Trust House Forte's Cumber-land Hoted, Marble Arch, at 8.32am, only 11 minutes before the Selfridge Thistle Hotel received its birds. The Stakis team had missed their plane at Ermin's Hatel, Caxton Street, at .25am.

Village guns crack lordly image

The men from the Yorkshire village of Ickornshaw were out at dawn yesterday waiting for the first quack to mark the start of their Glorious Twelfth.

It was not a gentrified shoot in the normal tradition. The local garage owner shattered the silence at 4.50am by firing a gun he had nor used for a year. Near him in the heather was the coalman, the elec-trician, a mechanic and a weaver. There were council workers and a joiner. All of them exercising an ancient right to shoot on the 999 acres of moorland as freeholders of lekorushaw.

Mr Chris Robertson, who has been on the shoot every August 12 for the past 16 years, said the right was jealously defended. All it cost them was a £6 game licence for an entire season, while on the big estates one day could cost up to £700. "It's what I call an unique bargain."

The right had been given by a patrician mill owner and dated back beyond the days when loom workers stalked the moor wearing clogs and working men fought off a group of high-banded Halifax gentry with pick-axe handles to keep them off the moor.

The men have their own cupping skills at imitating birds. People remember John Willie Teal who never missed a day on the moor between August 12 and December 10. He could quack like a hen so that neither man nor bird could tell the difference. One veteran recalled: "The old cock birds would listen to him and all but perch on the end of his gun. Mr Robertson summed up the day's success: "We did very well, a lot better than some moors where the weather and disease have roined the shooting this year. I got a brace and a half which will do me nicely. The important thing was to exercise the right for the sake of ickornshaw folk to

Young Daisy's visiter

A previously unpublished work by Daisy Ashford, author of The Young Visiters, has been discovered. Her family claim that she dictated it at the age of four to her parents. It is called The Life of Father McSwiney and tells the remarkable story of a jaunt to London by the reigning Pope a century before John Paul II's visit in 1982. Full of naive charm and mordant perception - and better spelt than most works by infant prodigies - it will be published on Thursday by the Oxford University Press in a collection of works from Daisy's ocuvre entitled The Hangman's Daughter and

An introduction tells the story of Daisy's childhood, with a section on how The Life of Father McSwiney came to be written.

Daisy's papist story was discovered last year, when Oxford published Love and Marriage, three romantic stories by Daisy and Angela Ashford. An interviewer on the BBC Kaleidoscope programme about Daisy spoke to Mrs Malcolmson, daughter of Daisy's sister Vera. Mrs Malcolmson mentioned having read the biography of the sparky Jesuit priest, Father McSwiney, some years ago and quoted some choice passages from memory.

Daisy Ashford, budding best-seller

. Henry Hardy of OUP, prince of the literary resurrection men, was listening to the programme and immediately got on the trail. He telephoned Mrs Margaret Steel Daisy's elder daughter. Yes, she said, she thought she might have such a story in a drawer. It must have come back to her after Vera's death. When Dr Hardy asked why it had not been offered for publication before, she replied: "It never occurred to me that anyone would be interested".

The first half of the story tells of the birth and childhood of James McSwiney in Cork, his piety ("full of a grand and Jesuit-like joy"), his first confession ("I should like to so much, as I feel rather wicked"), and his confirmation at the age of seven with "nine and a half" painted on his chest in black figures to persuade the bishop that he was old enough. When the second part starts, McSwiney is about to become a Jesuit. Now

A few lines of the manuscript towards the end are missing. About 34 words between "was rather" and "they caught the fleas". THE LIFE of FATHER McSWINEY

HEN James McSwincy was about twen-ty-five, he began to be a novice for the lesuit life. After he had taken his vows, he began to wear horsehair shirts, and very tight belts with gold buttons. He wore sandals half a size too large for him, and a floppy hat with a green band, to show he was a Jesuit. He bought himself a magnificent prayer-book the day before he went to the monks' college.

When he got there, a housemaid in a red frock came out and said, You must be very quiet. Jesuit, for there are visitors. There are four priests, and two very ignorant

"How do you do, my dear Father McAuliffe", exclaimed Father "I do very well, thank you", replied Father McAuliffe, in a sweet angelic voice.

"I expect", said the good fat Father McSwiney, as he sat down, you will be a canon in a few days, you look so dreadfully pious." "Oh! well I don't quite know", said Father McAuliffe. Then Father McSwi nose and began thus: "You know, I said the Mass of St Bernard this morning, and I don't think it agreed with me very much, as I don't feel very well," "I am so sorry to hear that". began Father McAuliffe, rapidly shrinking as he was not very strong; "it seems a great pity that a novice should not agree with his mass,"

"It does seem a pity", said Father McSwiney, "but I never had a great devotion to St Bernard."

"I am afraid". said Father McAulifie, looking very sad and timid, "that my Mission is very small, and somehow I'm rather uneasy about it." "Is that so?" said Father McSwiney: "if I could convert a duke or two and send them down to you, that might make it better, mightn't it?" It would be so very kind if you would", said Father McAuliffe, "you see I don't quite know how to arrange my services. I have conlessions before and after mass every morning, but the people tell so very few sins that the absolution isn't so long: so I can't sit peacefully there, and I think over what vestment I shall wear, and in my sermons I really don't know what to say, I either talk about the birth of our Lord, or obedience to the commandments of the Church, and I am sure the people must have heard it all

"That reminds me", said Father "That reminds me", said father McSwiney, "that I have had three sermons given to me by Father Seraphim, and they are all written out; they might do - you could read them out on the three coming Sundays."

Sundays, "It would be such a pleasure if you would send me two or three". answered Father McAuliffe; "I'm sure I will be most grateful to you, and I will say many Our Fathers and Hail Marys for you. I suppose I had better go and see the priest of this retreat place. I have business to talk with him, if you do not mind my leaving you."

"Well to tell the truth, I am coming with you", said Father McSwiney, with a chuckle in his chest.

"You are lucky, holy Father", said a novice to Father McSwiney as he "I know not the reason then", answered Father McSwiney, going upstairs. At last he reached a small room, in which sat the Pope, holding the habit which Father McSwiney did not know he was just going to receive. "I have brought you a habit", said Pius IX, holding out a brown habit with a hood to it. "Thank you, dear Pope", said Father McSwiney, throwing himself at the feet of Pope Pius IX. Five days later Father McSwiney knocked at the Pope's door.

The Hangman's Daughter and other PHS stories is published by OUP at £2.95. "Come in", said the Pope in an ili

"You have given me the wrong habit", said the good Jesuit.
"Have I. I thought you were going to be of the First Order of St Francis", said the mild and innocent

"Please give me the black habit, if your holiness does not mind", answered the most "beautiful-in-his-words" Father McSwiney.

"Most willingly", answered the Pope, giving the black habit at that moment to the Jesuit. "My most honoured thanks to retreat at Manresa was given by the Revd T. Gordon Goodwin, and Father McSwiney was shown upstairs by him pious goodbye to the Holy Father. The room into which he was shown was very small indeed; it was furnished with three chairs and a small table in the middle, on which was the Old Testament and other pious books. In one corner of the room in a very draughty place was a bed made of an old straw mattress covered over with a quilt. Where the fire ought to have been, but was not, was a small grotto, made of oak wood. On this grotto was a statue of Our Lady with two wax candles each

"Here", sad Father Goodwin, "is your room; you see you have everything you want but your bath, and you will find that the opposite side of the landing. Whenever you are in here you must pray hard."

"Certainly, I shall be delighted", said the pious Father McSwiney, clasping his hands tight.

Next morning Father McSwiney jumped up and had his bath and then the Pope, who was in his dining-room. said that all the novices were to be taken to the meditation room to be tried on This is how the Pope began: he said to Father McSwiney, who stood at the top of the class, "Say the Lord's Prayer." Father McSwiney began in his low voice and after he had finished the Pope said, "What were you thinking about when you said it?"

'God", said Father McSwiney "That's all right", said the Pope; "come here to me." Father McSwiney walked up, his sacred face beaming with joy.

"Pax tecum", exclaimed the Pope, you are the piousest of all."

Father McSwiney smiled and looked round at the other novices as if to say, "What do you think of that?", at which the other novices were rather insulted.

like", exclaimed the Pope.
Father McSwiney said "Yes", and this is how be was made a Jesuit. First of all the Pope washed his face in holy water and oil and then blessed him; after that he gave him fresh ciothes and the Jesuit habit.

'I'll make you a Jesuit if you

"Now" said the Pope, "you must stay in this monastery till you have grown a beard and then will be a

When his beard had grown he felt rather stuffy and wished monks could go without beards. And then a great event was to happen in honou of his being a Jesuit. A lovely mass was to be said at which the ladies were only allowed to sing the Kyrie. When the mass was over a lovely breakfast took place in the Manresa

There was first some lovely Italian coffee which the Pope had brought with him and some French tea, and then in the middle of the whipped creams, as they were eating them, the Pope said, "Let us make speeches you begin, Father McSwiney."

Father McSwiney sot up on a chair and said: "Clergy, ladies and gentlemen, as I have been made a Jesuit F stand on this rickety chair to give you thanks for coming to the entertainment. I don't mean to say that I think myself pious because I am a Jesuit - I might be very wicked. Oh how well I remember the first day I was in this monastery" and here he felt very like crying, so he got off the rickety chair and the Pope gave him a bun and an ice-creath in honour of his nice speech.

Then the Pope made his speech but he stood on a throne and said, "Dominus vobiscum et cum spiritu tuo in nomine Patris et Filii etc. This is a happy day. I feel cold and joyous and I return thanks to the darling Father McSwiney who is so humble - he says he is wicked but ah! his goodness runs through my heart like sacramental wine."

Here the Pope began to weep violently, and nobody knew what for, but he managed to get off his throne somehow, and the Arch-bishop lugged him into an armchair as he thought he was going to faint, and two bishops poured wine down his throat.

The next day, as Father McSwiney was reading the New Testament in his room, in walked the Pope all ready dressed in his vestments.

"Fullo Father!" he said; "I am off to see the London sights, and I mean to take you with me. Have you packed?" he added with sigh of relief.

Holiness", replied Father McSwiney, "but I did not expect such a grand invitation as this." "All right", answered the Pope, "you pack up while I put up a few new shirts in my box which have just unexpectedly come."

Father McSwiney, in a great state of excitement, bundled up his monkish clothes into his portmanteau and walked downstairs with it in his hand, and continued to wait till the Holy Father would appear.

"I'm coming", shouted the Pope from the top of the stairs, "and I will pay your fare. As soon as Father McSwiney and the Pope had bid a tearful goodbye to their sympathizing companions, they soon found themselves walking hand in hand into the station at Barnes, After having tried their weight, and taken a piece of chocolate from the slot, they soon found themselves seated in a firstclass carriage and going off to "The first thing we'll do, you know", said the Pope, "is to go to the Opera: it's very good, I've heard will now tell you where these two went. They went to Durrant's Hotel to spend a few nights with a favourite Catholic waiter of theirs. The first lark they had was to go to Drury Lane with this waiter. As the three walked together the waiter said. "There's a love scene in the play", and here the Pope nudged Father McSwiney.

There was a love scene, and it was very pious, and in it there was a great deal of conversation about St. Joseph, and Father McSwiney laughed with pleasure; in fact the Pope did too.

ween the acts they went out and had brandy and water and a pint of whisky toddy, and the Pope, although the Father of all Christians, thought it was quite necessary

They did not enjoy Drury Lane as much as they thought they would, because the lady at the bar kissed her hand to Father McSwiney, and that they thought was very fast. So they immediately went to the Gaiety Restaurant to have a few mutton chops and fried soles.

In the middle of support the Pone

In the middle of supper the Pope rang the bell for some mashed potatoes and gravy, and in came a red-faced tipsy waiter. The Pope was fairly astonished, and to show that he was so he poured two or three drops of water down the waiter's throat, and patted his back to see if it would make him come un-drunk, but it was no good.

So what do you think that talented Father McSwiney did? He made the waiter sit in front of the fire till he got his right senses, and then he sat beside him on the sofa and gave him full instructions on not being drunk, while the Pope looked on and smoked a pipe. After that awful adventure they soon left that restaurant you may be sure.

That night these two were very unfortunate. They could not find a bed anywhere, so they wandered about the low streets of London till they saw a fat old man, who volunteered to give them a night's lodging in his Public . . .

that anyone under 30 will need to be told that it was a brilliant production with a large cast (20m, 10f) and gave a pretty grim impression of life in the medical ward of a London ching hospital which I called the Sir Stafford Cripps. And anyone under 50 will need to be told that Stafford Cripps was the embodiment of post-war austerity.

The play had started from my own observations as a patient during three attempts to inflate a collapsed three attempts to inflate a collapsed lung, but had become with each draft more ghoulish, a process I now see to be an error of judgment. Still it was nothing like as morbid as Orwell's essay How the Poor Die, which was to some extent my model. This told of his spell in a Paris hospital in the 1920s and dwell on heated remedies and castal death. on brutal remedies and casual death with a relish that Swift might have envied. Yet for all that, Orwell's widow was among many on the left who thought my play a reactionary attack on the health service.

In fact, I have never doubted that the NHS was an aspect of public life for which every British person could feel some pride. Being well-estab-lished, it could not be harmed by criticism, only strengthened, so hardy and fruitful that no government would dare uproot it, so obviously right that private medicine would soon, like Marx's proletariat, wither away. We live and learn.

Brought down by a virus, needing minor operation and faced with an intolerable waiting list. I have for the first time paid for treatment in Harley Street. The operation was carried out in the early morning. I woke from the general anaesthetic at 10 and looked out on a scene as busy as any in Tehran or Kuwait. Burnouses and veils passed to and fro in this new Casbah of Cures, fathers, leading their families to the right counter in this Harrods of Healing. And where did the shopkeepers learn their business? In those same National Health teaching hospitals which I had sent up in that old play.

Perhaps the Ancurin Beyan would have been a better name for my ward because it was he, not Cripps, who swung the service on the BMA by exploiting a rift between surgeons

Not the Peter Nichols. Not the one, and physicians. Many welcomed it, of course, and most learnt to work within it and still do, moonlighting in Harley Street for only part of the working week. So why worry? If oil money subsidizes our national health, isn't that only Robin Hood in modern dress, a new distribution of wealth? Who can blame a nurse for going private when her association has promised not to strike for better pay, believing their work to be outside politics, which of course no one's is. This tension will not hold. I do not believe that commercial medicine and a real public health service can live together for long.

The last nail in the coffin of communism as killed by the Soviets

The tension will not hold. I do not believe that commercial medicine and a real public health service can live together for long . . . One of them must wither away.

The question is, which?

was the news that they now allow a sector of private medicine. An area of privilege is no more necessary or welcome in health than in education. If Marxism is only to be an alternative view of history, most of us won't be concerned. What interests us is the practice of equality, which notion Mary McCarthy said was irresistible. In a world that values only profit, either commercial medicine or a public alth service must wither away.

The question now is: which?
We all know about waiting lists -I hear that a hernia may be done in seven years. An elderly woman friend of my mother's spent her savings on a hip operation that enabled her to leave the house. For advice on how to live with tinnitus. I would have had to wait two years - or two months If I paid. I not only bought my way up the queue but got a general rather than a local. "How the poor get cured" is as urgent now as how they die. And "who are the poor?" is another question. Drinking a post-operative coffee after signing my cheque, I browsed through the brochures. A new scheme aims to attract British customers by offering twin-bedded rooms at a cost that will come within the range of the private insurance companies. So now ever-the better-off British are - by the standards of Messrs Leech and Sawbones - the official poor. Com back, Stafford Cripps, all is forgiven.

Now a golden oldie road report

Whatever I am doing about the house, whether struggling in the kitchen or wiring a topiary peacock, I always have one car cocked to Radio 4. What other service gives such extensive coverage of the arts as Kaleidoscope or the immediacy of Today, a programme that sets you up with all you need to know for the next 24 hours? But, passionate devotee though am, I have a complaint to which, I hope, the BBC's new chairman, Stuart Young, will address himself:

I have always accepted that The Archers has to be repeated, in fact three times in all. But now, increasingly evoking a scream, a shout of "Not again" and a flick of the off-switch, the practice is being extended to other programmes that formerly went out once only.

During the silly season especially, I suppose, impoverished planners have to paper over the odd hour or two at bargain basement prices. But can that really justify editing Richard Baker's entertaining Start the Weck on Monday morning and broadcasting it again the same evening?

Robert Robinson's irritating vehicle for the opinionated. Stop the Week - thankfully off the air for the moment - is repeated only four hours after its first transmission on Saturday evenings to ensure that we don't miss any crumb of its perpetual demolition of everything from gardening to old-fashioned good manners.

Plays are endlessly repeated. though the intervals are much longer. Often a play strikes a familiar but disconnected note in the memory; phrases float around in the recesses of the mind trying, vainly, to be placed. But all is revealed at the end when the announcer tells us that the play was last broadcast in 1976 or 1981 or 1965, Concerts share the same fate, although music by its very nature is one long repeat, so it is far less obtrusive. It is repeats involving words that really nag.

The repeat cycle at its most levastating can begin on Monday with an extract from the programme devoted to what's in store for us during the coming week. There will be the programme itself and its repeat, then perhaps another dose in Margaret Howard's Pick of the Week on Friday evening - with a repeat on Saturday morning. Add to this sections used as trailers and one can be hearing either a whole pro-gramme or chunks of it up to eight or nine times within seven days.

Then, of course, there are the programmes devoted to recycling programmes devoted to recycling Sir Roy Strong is Director of the old material. The BBC archives have proved to be a goldmine for every variety of reruns. There is straighcomedy like the present Sunday from the 1960s and early 1970s. Joyous in their heyday, they now do positive disservice to Kenneth Home, Kenneth Williams and Betty Marsden, their mainstays. Time has moved on so much that their topical allusions are as remote as those in The Shoemaker's Holiday. But the archive offers much more than that to the purveyors of nostalgia. With judicious editing and the addition of a commentary. "new" programmes can be created from dusty old recordings. The voices of the great can be cobbled into radio portraits and the vanished worlds of music hall or musical comedy made to live again. It would be interesting to have the statistics on repeats. Is it my imagination or have they increased dramatically in the past five years? And with the BBC's diminishing resources, where will it lead? At the moment it looks as though Radio 4 could become one gigantic feast of repeats, apart from the News, and I sometimes suspect there must be regrets at Broadcasting House that even this cannot be repeated. Perhaps it could be. After all old news is safe; its disasters no longer devastate, its threats no longer

And why not repeat old weather reports? The same applies to them, In fact, why not give over a whole wavelength to repeats and provide more time on Radio 4 for something new? It might be less frustrating in the end for planners and listeners

Mexico is more important to the Unites States than Israel, the whole of the Middle East, and probably Europe too. That importance may not be recognized explicitly tomorrow when President Reagan meets President Miguel de la Madrid in La Paz. Their discussions, it is said, will concern developments in Central America. Behind those discussions, however, there is a tacit acceptance that the fate of the two countries has become even more interwoven, so that both would suffer from any continuous disagreement over what to do in Central America.

Unfortunately that disagreement already exists in a form which may not allow resolution. The view from Washington is that developments in Central America could ultimately subvert Mexico. The Mexicans resent this attitude as one more manifestation of American paternalism. However, American suspicion of Mexican stability is long standing and well founded in view of recent Mexican developments - the scale of its problems and the unpredictable and mysterious nature of its politics. The collapse of Mexican stability, leading to insurrection, revolution, or just a prolonged period of economic and social disintegration cannot feature in any exchange of courtesies between the presidents, but it features in the minds of American policy-makers.

The effect on the United States of such a collapse in Mexico would be very serious: The two countries share a common frontier of 1600 miles. Their economies are similarly bound together. The United States is Mexico's main trading partner, the destination and source for more than three-quarters of Mexico's trade. Mexico has replaced the Middle East as the principal foreign source of American oil, while the United States in turn supplies Mexico with 82 per cent of its imports. So, regardless of geo-politics, the United States has considerable vested interest in the performance of the Mexican economy. Washington has watched with justifiable concern the mismanagement of that economy by the last President, and the difficult stabilization programme of President de la Madrid. The Mexicans, for their part, can legitimately claim that the performance of the US economy has a critical impact on their own through the rise in interest rates which costs Mexico $700m for each percentage point rise, given Mexico's need to service is huge international

The border is not controllable. Moreover, a Mexican Government dedicated to mischief-making could aggravate its relations with the United States by laying claim to territory beyond its border with as legitimate a basis for the claim as the Argentine one to the Falklands - in other words juridically questionable, but rhetorically popular in Latin America.

It is symptomatic of the Mexican unwillingness to share Washington's concern for these Government prefers to maintain the status quo on the border, even though it festers in their bilateral relations. Mexicans seem to consider that it is a necessary safety valve within Mexico, to allow a sufficient number of its citizens to escape their social and economic difficulties by illegal emigration to the United States. That does not say much for Mexico's self-confidence in its future capacity to manage its own society in the face of further infection from Central America The trouble with Mexico is that the presidential system introduced with the 1917 Constitution does not provide for any real popular participation in presidential politics other than in the most formal sense of regular elections. The President is selected secretly. He is then elected without having to reveal either his policies or the base of his political support. It is true that Mexico has avoided the military intervention that has characterized the rest of Latin America, but the health of this secretive, unpredictable and inherently arbitrary system of leadership cannot be taken for granted in the face of the sustained instability of most other countries in the region. Under the influence of oil revenues the State has become more centralized in its planning. Mexico's leaders are more technocratic and less populist. That might augur well for the management of its economy in terms which would find favour with the IMF. But the nightmare for some Washington officials is that Mexico's technocrats will discover that they are as out of touch with the scale of disaffection in the rural areas of their country as were the Shah's managers in Iran. It cannot be pleasant for Washington policy makers to visualize a future for the United States sharing a common frontier with a neighbour of 73 million inhabitants vulnerable to such political

Parents and Pill From Dr David Cowper

Sir, I have read your leading article, entitled "Parents and the Pill" (July 27) and found that you put forward both sides of the discussion cogently, but I do not think the writer can have been a doctor who has been directly faced with a request for contraception from a girl who is under the age of sixteen.

Firstly, I would say that in my own experience it is a relatively rare occurence. Usually by the time someone of this age group asks for contraception they have already been sexually active. There are a smaller minority who take "the pill" merely to keep up with their peer group and are not sexually active.

In the past I have delivered more DEL DISI baby and a 14-year-old of her second baby. I admit that these types of confinement are rare, but are never the less traumatic for all concerned, including the doctor.

I would suggest that prescribing contraception to sexually active girls could reasonably be construed as good preventive medicine.

As far as I know there is no published evidence which shows that a girl or young woman using an oral contraceptive is therefore more liable to be promiscuous.

I think Mrs Gillick would have a justifiable case if she could show that doctors are actively persuading their younger female patients to use contraception against the wishes of the patient. I do not believe that any of my colleagues are adopting this type of behaviour.

It appears that girls who are sexually active early in their lives often come from homes where communication within the family has been poor, or has broken down I believe that having legal sanctions to back up parents would almost certainly limit discussion within the family even more. It might also act as a lure for physically mature, but emotionally immature adolescents, on the basis that "forbidden fruit" are often more tempting and challenging.

Criminal evidence

From Sir David Napley

Sir, Mr Douglas Hurd's carefully phrased answer (August 2) to my etter (July 20), will simply not do. There may be a basic Home Office circular to the police recommending that scientific findings, having a bearing on the case, should be made available by the police to the defence, but in 46 years' experience of criminal justice I cannot recall a single case in which it has so far happened.

Mr Hurd asserts that in summary trials the results of any examination which the prosecution proposes to use in evidence are supplied to the defence. Apart from certificates as to excess alcohol in drink driving cases this is not correct. It has been the procedure for many years, under the Magistrates Courts Act, for copies of statements to be supplied in advance of the committal proceedings. This has nothing to do with the laboratories and in the preponderance of cases the scientific statements are so worded or edited that the matters which may assist the defence are not generally self-evident.

Theatre museum From Mrs Jack Emery Sir, Mr Hodsman (August 6) refers to cultural activities and the heritage as an optional extra to be paid for only when the nation has already paid for its defence, education, health and social welfare. In so doing he perpetuates a fundamentally erroneous view of national priorities and one that does much harm to the arts.

The claims of all components in our national life must legitimately exist side by side. It is the interplay between them that defines the character of British society at any one time. And the values of that society are continually expressed and challenged in what we call "the arts," our traditions of literature and criticism, of music and the visual and performance arts. The idea that the storing of "theatrical ephemera" is crucial to the national interest can easily be ridiculed. So can a consignment of bedpans or a delivery of ground sheets. That is to miss the larger point of national cultural identity. What price education with no new writers or playwrights? What price health and welfare with no sustain-ing cultural values? What price defence when there's nothing left to defend? Yours faithfully

the most part, of ephemeral application. Either this output is of value or it is not. If it isn't, then the Met Office should be abolished. But if it is, as is demonstrably the case, then to the extent that it is not made use of, money spent on the Met Office is being wasted.

It can indeed be argued that having spent a large sum of money in producing this potentially valuable information, the sensible thing to do is to spend more money, if necessary, to ensure that the effort has not been wasted: to see that the information is used as widely as is economically and socially profitable.

It was not easy to convert these principles into practice. As far as I can remember, we decided that the general output of the Met Office should be freely available to all and that every help should be given to the press and broadcasting auth-orities to disseminate it as widely as possible; and that only where special arrangements had to be made to meet an industrial or commercial requirement should a charge be

On this basis it would be wrong, I think, to seek by whatever means to raise a charge against members of the public who ask questions by telephone and thus assist ti forecasters to make better use their expensively-acquired ephemeral information,

Attlee's Korean policy

From Professor Alan Thompson Sir, General Sir Anthony Farrar Hockley's lucid article today (Special Report, July 27) on the Korean war clearly makes his forthcoming book on the subject obligatory reading for all students of postwar political, military and economic history. I would add only one observation to his treatment of the British involvement in this war, This was the crucial role of the Prime Minister, Mr Clement Attlee.

His decisive leadership in the Cabinet led to the immediate despatch of two battalions (two months ahead of our promised brigade group) to defend the Natking river where, as Sir Anthony points out, a brave and skilful North Korean force was on the verge of breaking through. As a young Labour parliamentary candidate in 1950 I knew something of the intense opposition to Mr Attlee's stand from within his own party. Throughout all this pressure and manoeuvring. Mr Attlee remained cool, consistent and determined. The fury of his opponents, at party conferences and elsewhere. failed to move this quiet, implacable man from his chosen course of action.

Mr Attlee did not believe that the problems of Asia could be solved by military victory. Furthermore, his experience at Gallipoli in the First War left him with no illusions as to the sufferings and sacrifices of war. As far as the South Korean regime was concerned he never believed that Mr Syngman Rhee was a reincarnation of Abraham Lincoln or a dedicated reader of John Stuart Mill's essay On Liberty: He also had grave misgivings (as did President Truman) about General MacArthur.

What he did know, however (from the tragedy of Eastern Europe) was that, under Stalin, a larger tyranny threatened the world. His prompt despatch of a military force beiped to avert this threat.

In domestic political terms, Mr Attlee's achievement was outstanding. He committed the Labour Party firmly to a policy of collective security against aggression and gave it new confidence in its role in world

Paid jobs for all

rom Professor D. A. Bell ir, it does not need high-powered escarch to answer this question in general terms.

Some could be traditional jobs if raditional economic activity revives. Some will arise in the development of "new technology", but these will be predominantly for those with intellectual skills: it was acknowledged in a December, 1981, Initiative: A Programme for Action, Cmnd 8455) that jobs will be more plentiful at the level of technician and above than below. The historifor employment to move from manufacturing to service industries.

There are three related questions which do deserve the attention of the Government 1. What future is there for older men who have been thrown out of obsolete jobs who are not adaptable to the new types of employment? Should they have the option of an early pension in place of lump-sum redundancy payment?

2. The employment of the unskilled has always been precarious and will White Paper (A New Training be more so in future. Can we organise society so that there are no unskilled? If not, what do we offer

3. The key to everything is that cal trend, which is already visible in productivity in the UK should be other countries besides the UK, is doubled and labour costs reduced and that we cease to import such a high proportion of manufactured goods. This will not be achieved by merely adjusting taxes and interest rates, so what is to be done?

Christians.

Yet in the Eastern churches this is Mary's feast par excellence, while Jung hailed the dogma as the sign of the restoration of the feminine dimension to the deity. Some feminist theologians, such as Rosemary Ruether, have pointed to the potentially liberating features of this and other Marian dogmas in an overwhelmingly male and cerebral Christian tradition. "Liberation Mariology" is certainly on the North American agenda.

Undoubtedly much Marian devotion has been based on a distortion of the Mary of the Magnificat, the prophetic woman who, according to the Anglican Consultative Council in 1973. "praises the Lord for the radical changes in economic, political and social structures".

The late Pope Paul VI in his encyclical Marialis Cultus (1974) also criticized the false Mary of corrupt piety, stressing that "Mary of Nazareth . . . was far from being a timidly submissive woman: on the contrary she was a woman who did not hesitate to proclaim that enthusiasm among English In fact, the dogma of the Assumption is a development of that of Resurrection. As Christ is the first fruits of the harvest of the dead, so his Mother, the God-bearer, is raised up to share in the risen life of the glorified Body of Christ As in the Resurrection of Christ, so in the Assumption of Mary, it is the whole personality, the soma, which is

> The Assumption repeats the false dualism of body and soul which still affects the Christian world: it is the whole person which is raised, just as it is the whole material creation which is to be transformed and share the freedom of the children of God (Rom 8). Mary is thus the forerunner of the cosmic assumption of which Paul writes; she is the microcosm of the new and glorified creation. The dogma is in part an assertion of the materialistic basis of the Christian hope.

But the raising up of Mary represents also the evaluation of the poor, the anawim, God's little people. Small is not only beautiful: small is Queen of Heaven. It is this reversal of power structures which Mary predicts in her "byrna of the universal social revolution" (as Thomas Hancock called it).

God has looked lovingly on her humble state, her littleness, and as a result she will be Makaria, blessed. God puts down the dunastas and fills those in need. "It would be easy

The Feast of the Assumption of God vindicates the humble and to over-spiritualize the meaning the Blessed Virgin Mary, cele-oppressed, and removes the of these verses and ignore that literal interpretation", notes the evangelical scholar Howard Marshall. "The coming of the Kingdom of God should bring about a political and social revolution, bringing the ordi-nary life of mankind into line with the will of God."

The Assumption is also a pointer towards the recognition of the feminine dimension in God. Not in the sense that Mary is evalted to the status of a fourth person of the Trinity: but rather that, through the raising of this woman to share the divine nature, we should face the necessary consequence that hood, is involved in that nature. God is not male, and the motherhood of God needs to be taken seriously. Marian devotion can only too easily be used as a safety-valve, a way of transferring the feminine dimension away from God to an idyllic, virginal creature. So we relate to Mary, while retaining the essentially male-dominated symbolism of deity.

There is much to be wrestled with before we can assert positively that Mariology is a potentially liberating tradition. But the place of Mary alongside her Son can hardly be ques-tioned. As the late Fr Raymond Raynes once said: "If Our Lady is not in heaven, where the hell is she?" The truth of the resurrection demands that, whatever else we say, we must at least say that Christ is in heaven and his Mother with

Science report

Testing our daily rhythms By Clive Cookson, Technology Correspondent

The daily rhythm of our physical and mental activities is regulated by two separate biological clocks, recent research has shown. In normal life our internal clocks run with the same ecause they are reset every 24 hours by external events. But an experiment at the laboratory of Human Chronophysiology in New York has successfully uncoupled the two oscillators. one indicated by body temperature and the other responsible for the daily cycle of sleep and wakefulness, and proved that each affects a different type of activity. The US researchers kept a young volunteer isolated from all normal time clues for 52 days. They gave him meals and sent him to sleep according to a timetable designed for experiment without revealing the real time.

After nine days on a 24-hour sleep/wake schedule, the signal for the subject to go to sleep was delayed by five hours on the tenth day. Then the researchers imposed an exact 25.8-bour sleep/wake routine on the following 40

This timetable produced the required desynchronization of the two rhythms. The sleen/ wake cycle held to the imposed 25.8-hour period, while the body temperature (recorded automatically by a rectal probe every minute) followed its own independent 24.8-hour rhythm. (Many previous experiments with isolated volunteers have shown that the "free-running" circadian rhythm is normally slightly longer than 24 hours.)

Five times a day the subject performed a series of tests measuring simple manual dexterity and complex verbal reasoning. Computer analysis of the results showed that manual dexterity followed the 24.8-hour temperature cycle very closely, with best performances at the same time as highest temperatures. Performance on the cognitive tests depended on both the temperature and the sleep/ wake cycle, but much more on the latter. The subject reasoned fastest soon afterwaking.

The New York experiment helps to explain previous observations that people do simple repetitive tasks most efficiently during the late afternoon or early evening peak in body temperature, while jobs requiring more thought and/or short-term memory are done best in late

When our circadian rhythm is thrown out of phase by jetlag or by working on a night shift, the temperature cycle takes much longer to adjust than the sleep/wake cycle. So verbal reasoning recovers more quickly than physical dex-terity; better to be a jet-set journalist than a globe-trotting

OBITUARY

LORD WIGG Controversial commitment to security and Army affairs

Lord Wigg, PC: who died in London on August 11 at the age of 82, was an active figure in politics for many years, and reached the peak of his influence during the period from 1964 to 1967, when he was Paymaster-General in the governments of Mr Harold Wilson, as he then was.

Wigg's exact responsibilities in this position were never exactly defined, though efforts were frequently made to find out what they were. What was known was that he was very close to Wilson, that he was responsible for keeping Wilson informed about developments within the Labour Party, and that he took a particular interest in matters of security and in desence in general.

His interest in desence dated back many years, to the time be had spent in the Army before and during the Second World War. This experience coloured his view of politics, and he was often seen as bringing the style and attitudes of a barrack-room lawyer into Westminster.

He had, in fact, a devouring passion for the Army. As an old sweat who had served for some 25 years, he believed he knew how men in barracks behave, and that he could spot a scurvy quartermaster a mile away. He expressed measureless contempt for any army that kept its officers fat and its men thin.
At the same time he had a marked streak of pugnacity. He enjoyed rows particularly if they involved the smiting of Tories or Ministers of Defence though he would privately admit that his lust for battle sometimes obscured his judgment. But his anger arose, not from a choleric temperament. but a passionate desire for social justice. It was his concern that the soldier should get a square deal which made him a merciless harrier of successive the Turf, and loved to spend time at the races, mixing with trainers and owners. He himself owned race-horses at one time. After leaving the government in 1967, he became chairman of the Horserace Betting Levy Board, where he remained until 1972 and showed his characteristic bluntness in challenging the rules of the Jockey Club.

George Edward Cecil Wigg was born on November 28, 1900, the son of an Army officer. He won a scholarship to Basingstoke Grammar school, and left at the age of 14 to work that the rumours were justified; in a factory. In 1919, he joined and who, with Barbara Castle the new Tank Corps, and during and Richard Crossman, broke his subsequent Army career! the story by raising the rumour spent some time in the Middle during the Vassall debate. East, which gave him a lasting interest in Arab affairs. He also armed with further evidence, and their three daughters.

educated himself through the Workers' Education Association. (WEA) He left the Army in 1937 to become a part-time organizer for the WEA, but returned three years later as an officer in the Royal Army Education Corps. In 1945 he stood for Parliament and was elected MP for Dudley, which he represented until 1967. For some years he was Parliamentary Private Secretary to Mr Emanuel Shinwell, as he then was, first at the Ministry of Fuel and Power, and later at the War Office.

In those days Wigg to some extent supported the Bevanites, but he also believed in party discipline, and in 1951, after Bevan had resigned, Wigg became a Labour Whip, which he remained until 1954.

He was early associated with Harold Wilson. He gave him open support in 1961 in his challenge for the leadership of the Labour Party after the Clause Four and unilateralism disputes. Two years later, after the death of Gaitskell in 1963. Wigg acted as Wilson's campaign manager in the leadership struggie. Unlike other canvassers.

Desence Ministers over recruit-Wigg worked silently, keeping a ing and the ending of National close watch on developments from the sidelines. But he was a He long had a fondness for: skilled analyst of the forces in play, and his assessment of Wilson's support among the 249 Labour MPs was only three out when the result was announced. Nowhere else was his talent for political strategy so apparent as in the way he achieved the downfall of Mr John Profumo, and very nearly of the Macmillan administration. It was Wigg who broke the story of Profumo's association with leadership, who through the evidence he had painstakingly collected, convinced Wilson spurred Wilson on to press for a further inquiry. He shrewdi advocated that Labour should concentrate on the security aspect of the affair, rather than that of sexual morality, and that strategy served the party well. With his wide ears, his beat nose and doleful face, Wigg was a cartoonist's delight. In Parlia. ment he acted with courtesy for the greater part of the time, but he also had his devastating outbursts, and then he was a master of invective.

He was also a master of parliamentary tactics. He had a delight in filibustering, he loved to sabotage motions, and he knew how to create confusion with shouts of "Object!" or "I spy strangers!" He claimed to hate Tories: "I hate their guts: I always have and I always shall"

When Labour returned to power in 1964 Wigg as Paymaster General was given responsibility for advising Wilson on security questions within No 10's ambit, as Wilson himself confirmed. But beyond that his official role escaped precise definition. What was clear was that he operated as Wilson's confidential aide on a wide range of issues; and no minister or civil servant was ever closeted with the Prime Minister so regularly or so long as Wigg.

Wigg's wide brief to keep a watch on Labour MPs caused its frictions. as did his belief that his responsibility for security matters entitled him to a say in matters normally in the purview of the Defence Ministry. He was also hypersensitive, like Wilson himself, over leaks to the press, particulary on military matters, and that led to controversy over the D-notice

Wigg's interest in racing went back many years. From 1957 to 1961 he was a member of the Racecourse Betting Control Board, and from 1961 to 1964 of the Totalisator Board. When he moved to the Horserace Betting Levy Board in 1967, he made it clear that he was not going to be a mere figurehead, and he was outspoken on many occasions over the rules of the Jockey Club, which he regarded as 100 conservative. In racing as in politics, Wigg say himself as a spokesman for the ordinary man. He took the view that the existing system was too favourable to owners Christine Keeler to the Labour and trainers, and that more money should go such matters as reduced admission charges and improved amenities. In 1973 he became president of the Betting Office Licensecs' Association: In 1972 he published his autobiography

The first of four comics to with The Sunday Times) explore the roots of his humour would he have realised in the new series Comic Roots on BBC !. Michae Palin of the Monty Python team, traced its beginnings back to a father who used to place take dog messes on the carpet shortly before guests were expected. Palin's sense of humour as a child was similarly basic. His best friend's parents recalled that his favourite job was to be a lavatory attendant, and that some of the rhymes he made up were rather rude. His old geography master, who obviously hadn't heard them, remembered him as "a clever boy, quiet, not humorous really - but of course we didn't have that kind of humour in those days, did we?" Travelling back to his ado-lescence in Sheffield, the point came across through reminscences with old friends of how accidental a comedian's career is. If he had not been invited to join an amateur dramatic group by a colleague at the seeiworks he had gone into after failing his Cambridge interview . . if he had not then gone to Oxford and struck up a comic partner-ship with Robert Hewison (now would he have realised his talent for this clusive art?

An interview with Spike Milligan, whose Goon Show was a revelation to the 11-yearold Palin, emphasized the point. Still starry-eyed after all those years. Palin asked how the Goons had been formed. "Just by chance," said Spike. "We had a good summer, that was

Palin joined forces with Terry

Jones for the first time at the Edinburgh Festival and critics wrote of "a new generation of satirists in the wake of Beyond the Fringe. On leaving Oxford, narrator intones over a scene of Palin gazing thoughtfully through a train window, "there was very little future for me in any respectable profession. I was one of that cursed generation doomed to take nothing seriously at all. As it turned out, to the good forume of Monty Python devotees. Palin and his friends filled the gap left by their boyhood heroes, the Goons.

WEEKEND CHOICE

A Complex Heart (tomorrow, BBC 2, 8.10pm), an essay on Gustave Flaubert by Julian Barnes, embellished with lustrous pictures by the cam-eraman John Else, is all the better for its lively rejection of the academic approach. Flaubert the man is here as powerfully as Flaubert the writer. And so strongly is he here in Mr Barnes's commentary that, with all due respect to the actor Richard Bebb who is got up to look like Flaubert and confides quotations to the camera to considerable dra-matic effect, Mr Barnes is really the only other living person whose presence on screen is ındispensable.

If, as Mr Barnes assures us, Flaubert is the literary icon to which he has referred since he was 15, then he does not prostrate himself before his idol. Rather, he views the icon with a respectful, ironic eye ("Graham Greene has referred to the writer's need to have a chip of ice at the bottom of his heart. Sometimes. Flaubert seems to have a whole refrigerator down there."). And there is an irresistible final flourish in Mr Barnes's reminder that, on the site of the house where Madame Bovary was written. a paper factory now stands. Not, however, for making toilet

The 20th Century Remembered (tonight, BBC 2, 8.30pm) is the third - and, so far, the best - extract from Kenneth Harris's four-part interview with Dean Rusk, the forme American Secretary of State. It could hardly have been otherwise, for it takes in not only the Cuban missile crisis when we tottered on the brink of the Third World War (Mr Rusk puts it better when he talks about Washington and Moscow looking down the cannon's mouth and not liking what they saw), but also the assassin's bullet that ended the Kennedy "Camelot" years, and, above all, the Americans' involvement in Vietnam. Away from the scene of conflict, Mr Rusk talks interestingly about the world's debt to Britain for its pioneering work on the notions of liberty under law and the imposition o constitutional restraints on the exercise of power.

day, the time soon after 8.30 pm and we had just switched on the car radio in an attempt to ease an endless journey down the length of the M4. We found ourselves in the opening min-utes of what was plainly a Salurday Night Theatre and one in which the early indications were unpromising.

The reasons for this soon took shape. The dialogue strove for sharpness and did not quite make it; actors, well aware of falling short, pushed their lines accordingly. The quality of the writing sounded even worse than it was. There emerged the outline of a rather forced story about a lady running a cordon bleu home catering service whose impact on the lives of her clients extended beyond the gastro-intestinal tract. I now see that the note of effortful desperation in the dialogue was occasioned by its attempt (like a pair of ill-inflated water-wings) to keep this none too buoyant frame affoat.

Indeed its power may be judged from the fact that it survived an overly symbolic final scene in which a dissenter dressed as an old style lollipop lady (emblem of care for the young) hurled herself into the path of a train bearing unsus pecting black children to their

If anything were to happen to you, wouldn't it be reassuring to know your family was financially secure and well protected?

With the Ambassador Life Family Protection Plan you could make sure they would be. It's a life assurance policy that's easy to afford and even easier to take out.

In fact, you can arrange cover of up to £50,000 here and now, by post. And, depending on your age, it could cost as little as £6.93 a month. That's around 23p a day.

TO FIGHT INFLATION. YOUR COVER CAN GROW TO £95,000.

In real terms, £10.000 of conventional cover taken out in 1973 is only worth around £2,700 today.

Consequently, we've taken positive steps to help shield your Family Protection cover against inflation. Each year, your benefits and premium increase by 10% of the first year's amounts.

If you take out cover of £50,000 now, for instance. it will rise to £55,000 next year. And by the tenth year, it will have grown to £95.000.

Yet_if you're 34 now.your premiums will only increase by 20p a week next year.

STRAIGHTFORWARD COVER. NO FRILLS.

Most insurance and financial experts agree that term assurance, which gives high cover for low premiums. is the most efficient way of protecting your family against your death.

It is the most straight forward form of life assurance. With no frills, no investment element and no costly hidden extras.

Also, your initial policy is for a ten-year period. And that gives you considerable flexibility. Because after ten years, your family needs may have changed. For instance, you might then have enough income to begin a combined life assurance and investment plan. However, like a lot of people, you may decide to continue with the simple high life cover you've already got.

And providing you're under 50 now, and accepted on our standard terms, we'll guarantee to cover you for at least a further 10 years.

We won't even ask for a medical. Naturally, your premiums for further periods will depend on your age at the start of each one. Remember that the tax man will help out with tax relief presently equivalent to 15% of your premiums. And, if you fall ill for six months or more, we'll waive your premiums from the sixth month of disablement until

The Market ended the account on a very subdued note as nervousness ahead of the United States money supply figures rekindled fears of higher US interest rates. This was despite the better performance seen in New York bond markets on Thursday.

The government broker took advantage of a minor rally in gilt prices to issue a new tap stock, £800m at 10 per cent convertible in 1986, after the market closed. Gilt dealers expressed surprise at the rate, suggesting that the Chancellor obviously expects the 10 per cent base rate to last for some

Speculation is mounting on where Associated British Foods is going to spend the £200m it raised by selling off its South African interests. Mr Garfield Weston, the chairman, had told analysts that the "no poaching" arrangement he is said to have had with the North American family interests - the Westons own Fine Fare Supermarkets in Britain - does not exist. So market rumours have it that a coming. The shares have firmed of the 140p year's low and stand

The reported stock shortages appear to be particularly acute in the insurance sector, after good figures from two of the majors earlier this week. Sun Alliance jumped 25p to 1,230p; Pearl firmed 27p to 700p and there are revived hopes of a bid coming for the company.

Newarthill has no record of takeover bids, but the 9.5 per cent stake held in UBM, at present under fire from Norcros, will make Newarthill £6.7m at the present bid price. So if that form is anything to go by, someone else may be stalking Whessoe

The reason for the increase in the share price of Prince of Wales Hotels over the last few days became apparent yesterday when it announced a big hotel acquisition from Epicure, which takes and 8.3 per cent stake in return. The shares lost 5p of the recent gain and closed at 118p. A bumper set of figures from Prestige, plus an extraordinary dividend payment, did wonders for the share price which soared 41p to 230p. A well-kept secret.

Merger in the cathedral

Hereford and Gloncester convene again Saturday it will be for their 256th festival. In 1902 an eminent musician said: "It seems like adding stone after sione upon a great monument when we attend the Three Choirs Festival year after year. Eighty-one years later, is the monument in danger of toppling over from the sheer weight

John Sanders, on whom as organist of Gloucester Ca-thedral the task of planning this year's festival and conducting many of its concerts falls, is sure that the Three Choirs still has a unique place among British festivals: "It's not just that we have such a strong tradition. We have a very special character, being devoted to the performance of choral music. And there's no festival, I think, among all those that have started in the years since the war, that has that emphasis.

"We have a strong amateur involvement in our musicmaking, because as well as the three cathedral choirs there is the festival chorus, which is not professional body and rehearses locally. And we manage to avoid the sort of generalized programmes which could be heard anywhere. We are very proud of our record in commissioning new choral works think new large-scale works for chorus and orchestra would hardly get written these days." This year's programme is no exception in including a healthy batch of works that will be heard for the first time: the festival has commissioned the completion of a symphony by Elis Pehkonen, (begun for the Stroud Festival); an organ-concerto from Charles Camilleri; an anthem from Richard snephard (a former Gloucester choirboy); and most ambitithe choirs, S. S. Wesley played ously, a large-scale Mass setting on the organ the "Dead March" from Paul Patterson, Missa

Patterson explains: "I didhave to tailor my writing very much to the amateur resources available, and I was careful to see that everything I wrote for a highly Christian chapter". the choir was practical to sing. I "There were some diff but they were surprised when I showed them the score to see all the curious notation with boxes and wiggly lines and so on. This new Mass is in a rather different style - not tonal, though it does use a lot of tonal elements. "I have worked with Tim Rose Price, who lives near has selected texts from the Bible done. which use the image of water - I have woven these into the Mass century the suple diet of the setting rather as Britten juxta- festival consisted of Mendelposed the Wilfrid Owen poerry ssohn's Elijah and Handel's m the War Requirem, though of Messiah, both repeated autocourse it is totally different in, matically each year, But as Mrs

Was Patterson very conscious of the Three Choirs tradition when writing the piece? "Oh yes, and of the special acoustics of the cathedral where it will be sung. I did try to make the piece practical and traditional - but also adventurous, like the festival. It's funny, because they are all steeped in Elgar and Finzi and Ivor Gurney there, but they will also take the trouble to rehearse something new, and audiences will come and hear it. There is a wonderful festival spirit, however old-fashioned some of it is, and hundreds of people will go there for the whole week and listen to absolutely everything and no to all the social events as

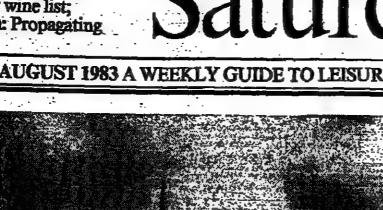

All this is a far cry from the tradition-bound "meetings" of the Three Choirs of the nineteenth century. Then, controversy raged as to whether oratorios ought to be allowed in the cathedrals, or whether only liturgical music should be heard. The festival depended on the financial support of the local landed gentry - they became "stewards" of the festival, a term which survives today, when stewards are holders of subscription tickets - and in 1875 the Earl of Dudley offered the chapter of Worcester the huge sum of £10,000 if they the cathedral for their meeting.

HE arguments were conducted in words, music when one cleric preached from Handel's Saul by way of commentary, and the Birmingham Town Crier published 2 poem complaining that the festival was "persecuted by pries, Puritans and parsons/Choked by

There were some difficult think they had enjoyed my moments in those days, John Voices of Sleep at the Proms. Sanders recalls "Even in this century, many clerics thought that Elgar's Dream of Gerontius was too Catholic a work to be performed, though it is now one of our most regular pieces. And the first movements of Vaughan Williams's Sea Symphony, which we are doing this year, were also thought too secular -Gloucester in Painswick, and he only the last movement was behaviour for him - I remember lots of details about how he wanted the works done, and it's interesting how the conductors today change things like em-phasis and tempo marks."

Criticism has often swirled around the festival for its unwillingness to change its wellestablished traditions - not least from this newspaper, which declared in a leading article in 1925 that the cathedral organist should not automatically conduct all the festival concerts, and should confine himself to Elijah or Messiah. That tradition persists, though there are an increasing number of guest conductors for the orchestral concerts (which this year in-clude Mahler's Tenth Sym-

It has had its bad luck with new works: Gloucester's last choral com-mission, Malcolm Williamson's Mass of Christ the King, was not orchestrated in time and had to be performed incomplete. Perhaps some of the recently heard works will go the way of Clarke-Whitfield's . The Resurrection (1825), Crotch's Palestine The Deluge (1833). But other a strong continuity in the festival through Percy Hull, organist at Hereford from 1918, and Herbert Sumison at Gloucester from 1928: Sumison retired only in 1967 and still lives nearby. Younger conductors, such as David Willcocks at Worcester and Meredith Davies at Hereford, came after the war and stayed for briefer periods, but John Sanders, who succeed ed Sumison at Gloucester, has remained there since 1968. Alice Sumison, wife of Dr Sumison, recalls: "The music has always been the most

as a social magnet around the cathedral towns, and the post-concert receptions, formal garden parties and tess loom large in the calendar. The ladies' committee organizes anctions, draws, musical evenings and — sign of the times — a Sponsored Knit-in. A regular American visitor emphasized how central to the whole festival is its social side: it is the only festival, he says, where he can discuss musical points freely with total strangers, and meet the artists and conductors in the same informal spirit.

these days. They don't quite take everything I give the trust - it's always more difficult to sell tickets for the new works - but there is a very openminded support for all we do".

Diana Oldridge: "I think people are so much more sophisticated now. There's so much more music in schools that I think the standards are going up every year.

"lt's all more commercial than it used to be, which is a pity, but I suppose that is a sign of the times. And there's more emphasis on the social side and not much on the benefit of the widows and orphans, which was established. But the good thing surely last another 256 years.

Perhaps the Three Choirs Festival is bound by tradition, but it is also acutely aware of the need for change. I could find no one who regretted the loss of those Messiahs and Elijahs. everyone wants to explore the new, as long as it is not too unfamiliar. In its peculiar way, firmly based on amateur and religious roots, reluctantly anxious to keep up with the times but deeply attached to the past. the Three Choirs Festival represents the essence of British music-making that has characterized our music from Byrd, to Purcell, to Elgar himself. From the outside the villas of the Algarve may look as though they had been built from the same pattern book with the same white rendering and terra cotta roof tiles. But on the inside all manner of British tastes had left their mark. One was a twentyfirst century hideaway in peagreen plastic and chrome. Another was pure Surbiton à la Portugaise with close Wilton carpeting and striped regency drapes covering up all those terrible hard tiled floors and rough stone walls. No one complained that his villa was anything but luxurious. At least had clearly been built for that declining band of English-men who believe that each of the children's bedrooms should have its own bathroom en suite.

The beaches are splendid and many have their own fresh fish grillers under the cliffs. The Algarve is a noted draw for sportsmen, particularly golfers and fishermen. While most tourists stay in villas, the golfers have their own hotel, the Pennina, on the road between Lagos and Portimao. It is large, luxurious, with a course designed by Henry Cotton and an interior with a strong whist of Denis Thatcher and Chivas Regal. There are large nineteenth century prints of St Andrews and small prints of the battle of Corunna.

Flinty charms of feudal Sussex This year, given the surfeit of Frenchmen in France, we took our summer break in England.

in what Common Market people call "Le Sousex". An amiable week of going to the beach", climbing historic towers. eating micro-waved lasagne verdi in pub gardens, walking the outer fringes of the Glynde Reach, cream teas, fish and chips (new potatoes still too soggy), Harvey's quenching bitters, all interspersed with bouts of potty-training

Our cottage was near Glynde-bourne in East Sussex. I'm not sure if occasional manifestations of local pride reflect enuine differences between the the two wings of that county. Certainly, the East was for Parliament in the Civil War, while the West's feudal estates sided with Charles. And the East has the university, the pavilion at Brighton, Denis Healey at Alfriston, Jim Callaghan at Uckfield, the Ashdown Forest and Beachy Head, the Newhaven ferry, and, minor matter, the spot where King Harold received one in the eye. The West has Bognor.

It was, even in Sussex, the most gasping August since Galileo invented the thermometer. I lay on a lawn riven with droughty crevasses, my feet in the paddling pool, reading C. L. R. James on why cricket is an art, while my ear heard England slump once again to the Third World New Zealanders. No London papers, no television, only a wirel the weather report. Lazy days in the sun seem to last longer than

The walk to Tide Mills beach from the parking lot winds past handsome flint and pebble walls, modern menhirs to an age not all that long gone. The "beach" is a quarry of stones dumped at low water mark. But oil pollution from the Dieppe ferry, which comes and goes from next-door Newhaven, is hardly noticeable.

Glyndebourne has Cinderella this year and it was the first time I had seen the yarn done other than as a panto. Rossini has taken away the magic. London-based Bestways is selling group departure fares in a selection of African destinations at less than APEX prices. These special fares are available to individuals, they can be bought at any time and you must stay away anything from between 14 and 30 days. Prices vary depending on the airline and Typical return fares for travel in August are Jo burg £530 to £620; Durban £670; Harare £535; Lusaka £535 to £580; Dar-es-Salaam £420 to £465; Kilamanjaro £450; Nairobi £325 to £450; Mombasa £430.

Latin America

Because far fewer people are travelling across the South Atlantic, the airlines are trying to encourage traffic by whatever means they can. The present consolidation fares valid for stays of between 10 and 35 days already offer savings of over 60 per cent on normal rates.

Typical return fares quoted London-based Steamond are: Rio de Janeiro £580, Sao Paolo £590, Santiago £743 and Buenos Aires £760. But I am told these are still not low enough to stimulate the market so expect prices to fall further still in the weeks ahead.

I am no purist in these authenticity and excellence tend flavoured, on a bed of sesame-to go hand in hand. Chinese cuisine involves more devolution than most. No one would expect a Western restaurant to master cuisine minceur, steak and kidney pudding and pasta simultaneously. Why demand it elsewhere, except as a sop to a jaded palate seeking sensation?

With these thoughts in mind, I determined to touch base with some of the original concepts of Chinese food. I would not presume so much as to claim that what follows constitutes the authentic article; life isn't that simple. of acquaintances from the Chinese mainland that we headed for Leicester Square and the Man Fu Kung. The contrast with Choy's could hardly be more marked. Man Fu Kung claims to be the largest Chinese restaurant in Britain, and is chiefly patronized by large and noisy Chinese families. The lunch-time dim sum (steamed specialities served from bamboo baskets) is highly regarded in Soho and good value, if you can find a table. For dinner, reservations will be required after 10.30pm when a Cantonese pop singer takes to the stage. This was a sophistication which we chose to decline. Once again, we began with cold hors d'oeuvres, at £6 a third more expensive than Choy's and half as good. The ham looked as if it had come straight from the supermarket and a vile green peppermint cherry topped the bland chicken breast. Things looked up with the arrival of the braised noodles, cooked in a straw mushroom stock, and the fried stuffed bean curd was excellent, swimming in a sauce of gartic ginger, spring onion and red eppers. The deep-fried honey chicken was pleasant enough, though the honey added little to the dish, and it seemed to me that what was supposed to be plum sauce had more to do with a bottle of Lea & Perrins. Ying Yeung prawns - supposedly a contrasting hot and cold dish had a him of curry on one side and sweet and sour on the other and had to be prised out of a reluctant kitchen.

With an uninspiring bottle of Macon Villages and two apentifs the bill totalled £35. Man Fu Kung's menu is much more extensive than most Chinese restaurants. Out goes galley slavery, in comes home comfort

Below decks in a modern yacht which is intended for comfort, there is much scope for ingenuity of design. All the facilities we have at home, and more, must be specially contrived and crammed into small irregular spaces so that they work reliably in a severely corrosive environment. Among the essentials for creature comfort are cabin heating, ventilation, sewerage, storage of drinking water, electrical power, lighting, cooking fuel, food storage, and even a

Such services are provided with varying degrees of technical complication, depending upon the size of the boat. The largest yachts will go as far as full air-conditioning and desalination plant, whereas the smallest will make do with a jerrycan of tap water and a single-burner Primus stove. In between, the average family yacht about 10m in length enjoys increasing ingenuity of design, with modern materials and techniques to provide convenient and efficient living in a limited space.

Leaving aside the endless technicalities of the engine and navigation areas, here are a few items selected for their purposeful design suited to the needs of a medium-sized vacht.

Rapid inflation

Away from the marina, time spent at a quiet anchorage can be id:llic. But a trip to the shore used to be marred by the thought of the chore of taking the inflatable dinghy from its locker and blowing it up with a footpump All that has been changed radically by the quite remarkable 12-volt Hurricane seconds. Captive coldness

B Refrigeration is a problem in all but the larger yachts. Electrical supply is limited when the engine is silent, and although there are numerous small, irregular shaped storage spaces, there are no convenient large spaces in which to put a less it was planned when the boat was built.

The Frigoboat solution is to distribute the machinery in convenient places, requiring univ a large evaporator plate to be housed in any suitable insulated compartment (or indeed, in more than one). A small compressor bolted to the engine is driven directly by a belt. On average, less than 30 minutes of engine running will modern stove makes lighting up give 12 hours of "silent easy, and if kept clean will coldness", enough for a 5.6 cu ft compartment, before the plate design from Blakes of Gosport needs recooling. 9 Solavent is an extractor fan driven entirely by sunlight. It is not something to keep you noticeably cool, but in good daylight it will change the air in a typical boat cabin inside 15 minutes. It has completely maintenance-free motor and bearings, and with its solar cells to provide the power, it is completely self contained. The makers claim it is proof against sea or rainwater, even when placed horizontally. But a "deadlight" can be provided to plug it off in the event of heavy seas. This is a new and promising British product. It will be interesting to see how it stands the test of time. From Solar Ventilation, 248 Weyhill Road, Andover, Hampshire (0264 58822). Price £29.95 direct (inc p&p).

Rotating telly

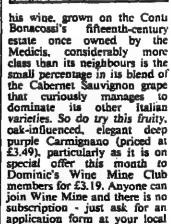

The more gentle cruising folk, who like to keep up their quota of television when the day's sail is over, have a particular problem. A boat at moorings may swing gently and never stay long facing in one direction. So the normal, highly directional type of television antenna won't serve. This mushroom form of design from Mohawk accepts signals from any direction and has an inbuilt booster amplifier. It works on any supply between 12 and 32 volts dc. and has a special filter to prevent interference from the boat's VHF radio telephone. It's a bit pricey at £57; available from Greenham Marine, Ringwood, Hampshire (04254 79064).

Alsace wines have nipped up in price noticeably over the last year or two and have worked themselves out of the everyday drinking category. But at Alsace Hugel Pinot Blanc wines wines have improved tremendously and Dominic's improved have an excellent '81 Hugel Pinot Blanc with a strong fruity nose and equally strong fruity taste; priced at £3.05 it is an easy wine to knock back on hot days. This fine white burgundy from Geisweiler is full-flavoured enough to take on most rich strong foods - odd perhaps as this '78 is the product of new vineyards. Peter Dominic have wisely decided too that the unloved '77 claret vintage was rather unfairly dismissed and they offer several of which the '77 Pibran (£4.85) with its garnet colour and big, rich, full almost chocolaty flavour is a sound buy.

Lots of the other IDV companies' wines are to be found on Dominic's shelves such as Piat beaujolais, the Morgan Furze and Gilbey Loudenne wines, plus Croft port and sherry. Croft celebrated their tercentenary in 1978 and to celebrate the occasion the company has come up with a superb '78 Late Bottled Vintage port, not cheap at £5.85, but one of the best LBVs I have tasted with its luscious rich ripe taste and soft almost almond-like character. Peat will ensure that the soil has a reasonable moisture-hold-ing capacity, and an open soil will encourage the roots, once formed, to take over the soil more quickly. Dry ground should be watered thoroughly so as to fully charge the area with moisture and allow surplus water to drain away before layering. An added advantage is Dwarf shrubs are always in great demand and shrubs which produce colour over a greater part of the summer are even more so. The Potentilias are such plants; they are not demanding in their needs. They will grow quite happily in most gardens, so long as the soil is not too acid or too alkaline. Give them positions either in full sun or in partial shade. Of the two well known forms, Hoya bella and Hoya carnosa, carnosa is the stronger and will tolerate a lower winter temperature. Bella needs more shade in the summer. Soilless composts are suitable and bella will grow in a smaller pot than camosa. Flowers are sweetly scented, creamy white in colour, and appear from about May to September. So long as the plants are flowering, a weak liquid feed such as Phostrogen every two weeks will keep them healthy. Maintain a high humidity during the summer but keep the plants much drier in the winter. Carnosa plants need to be about two years old before they

Pot Plants Most gardeners make plants looked after by a neighbour or friend while they are away on holiday. During this year's not weather, it has been much more difficult to hold plants than usual. Don't leave plants in a conservatory or close to south or west windows. Place them in a light but cool room where there is some air circulation. Give them a thorough watering just before you leave, and then place the pots on plant saucers which have been illed first level with pebbles and then with water. The bottom of the not should be just above the level of the water. Plants which can be plunged into wet peat or bank outside also have a reasonable chance of lasting over the holiday period. It is vital the plunge beds are well wetted after the plants have been placed in them. There are a number of capillary bench automatic waterers which are good. The system is for the reservoir to be topped up with water, which is then taken up by capillary action to wet the mat on which the plants are stood.

But that's only the start of it... Part Two has him back in the New World 27 years later mingling with the likes of Kit Carson, fighting with Custer at the Little Big Horn: "I ain't being clever", says our anti-hero "but if he'd done what I told him he might have saved most of his com-mand..." The research has been, as usual, meticulous. The characterization of Flashman flows without a fault as if he has swept aside his creator and at Groxbourne, a mini-minor taken over his own destiny. That one so shamelessly flawed so brainless and so venal can retain such charm, even when boozing "tight as tadpoles" with a smelly Apache chief, says much for the professional skill which lies behind him.

But it's the pace, the colour, the excitement, as much as Flashman himself, which make this, like its predecessors, such entertaining bedtime stuff. Mr. G. MacD. F. tells a rattlin good arn as Flashie might have put it, and long may be continue.

One person who would not have approved of Flashman is Gerald Glodstone, housemaster public school in Shropshire and anti-hero of Tom Sharpe's latest flight of funcy.

Groxbourne's academic reputation is not of the highest, which is why it accepts boys like the literally minded Peregrine Clyde-Browne and employs masters like the monocled Glodstone, a kind of knight errant manque, to teach them. Glodstone's weakness for clean-living, stiff upper lip schoolboy adventure yarns, his long-running feud with geogra-phy master Mr Slyme, and his wistful desire for a wife take him and his favourite pupil to France, aboard his vintage

Years of blowing hot and cold

The term "cold war" is too often an excuse for airing sloppy and subjective views on East-West relations. Fred Halliday's stimulating attempt to analyse the causes of US-Soviet conflict since 1945 skilfully avoids reducing complicated inter-national problems to a crude allocation of blame in the manner of partisan apologists for the superpowers. Indeed, Mr Halliday approves of neither the He finds Washington, however, the more at fault for 'making the Second Cold War" which, he says, began in 1979 after a decade of detente; these two phases were preceded by the First Cold War (1945-1953) which gave way to a period of "oscillatory antagonism" in which crises alternated with attempts to lessen confron-tation. Do Mr Halliday's four phases really clarify trends? The leath of Stalin in 1953 was

As attested by his careful references. Mr Halliday is well references. references, Mr Halliday is well a new arms boom and argues Second Détente, versed in western sources on that Moscow has been forced to Mr Halliday sees the deployment of SS-20 missiles as redressing the balance with the West, regrettably giving Nato the "ideal pretext" for deploying cruise and Pershing missiles "as an apparent reply to the Soviet action".

New 'realism' bites the dust

This is Bill Buford's eighth issue of the resurrected Cambridge magazine and the second to be produced in conjunction with Penguin. The venture is impressive for its energy and for earnest determination to keep its finger on the pulse of literary life. Buford combines seriousness of approach with marketing flair and, even if the result is somewhat pricey, it will at least ensure that Granta's profile floats some way above the competing literary mags.

But dirty? Realism? The use of either of those words is risky, the use of both is asking for trouble. The genre in question arises from America and seems to focus primarily on the short story. With characteristic confidence Busord contrasts it with the works of Mailer, Bello, Barth, Gaddis, Pynchon, Updike and Styron and appears to overturn the lot in favour of DR. But what about Cheever? No mention of the American short story can be completed without incorporating his massive achievement. And, more to the point, the case is not proved by the contents of Granta 8.

The characteristic tone of the school is flat, unseasoned narrative. Each author appears to put some effort into avoiding comment. The language is thin generally unassociative and clearly intended to be returned to its denotive functions, twentieth-century accretions. All too often, however, the mask slips: "When they did find him ('they' meaning people in uniforms)". Here Jayne Anne

Phillips's coy parenthesis betrays her, objectivity reveals itself for what it is, an

Missing author: John Cheever's contribution ignored by Grants

unacknowledged subjectivity and the realism crumbles, before its always victorious enemy - selectivity.

A further give-away is Buford's use of the word "haunting" to define the effects of the tales. Instantly it puts us back on to the old expressive treadmill of fiction, to language as a transparency through which meaning is discerned.

It is a species of atavism, of impatience with the head-clutchings of modernism and a rushing into the arms of that most deadly doctrine - postmodernism. Some are better than others - Raymond Carver and Tobias Wolff seem to claim some higher ground but dirt and realism seem to get the better of the rest.

Outside the school, this edition includes a tortured but efficient enough struggling with conscience over El Salvador by Carolyn Forche, Angela Carter on her father, a dreadful piece of overwrought "new journa-lism" from Michael Herr and a story by Todd McEwen. It is a robust and educative selection which served its function of getting at least this reader off the tence to shout the odds.

The play is based on a real case of the 1550s, a plot by two lovers to murder the woman's husband, Arden (played by Christopher Benjamin). Arden's wife, Alice, is played by Jemny Agutter, and her lover, a steward called Mosby, by Robert O'Mahoney. contemporary, perhaps.

Almost 300 paintings, prints and sculptures come from Camberwell, Central, Chelsea, St Martins and the Slade colleges, the Royal College of Art and the Royal Academy Schools. All are for sale, the prices ranging from £30 to £3,500.

James Christie, who founded the company in 1766, provided exhibition space for contempor-ary artists. Paintings by Gainsborough and Sir Joshua Reynolds hung amid grand furnishings, chaises, warming-pens and other items to be auctioned. Last year Paul Whitfield, managing director of Christie's, revived the tradition to give students a free launching pad in the West End.

Message from the signal box

Registration of insurance brokers, implemented in December 1981, gives the public important safeguards when it deals with insurance brokers who have had to provide evidence of their expertise and financial soundness to meet the requirements of the statutory Insurance Brokers Registration Council.

This pronouncement by Mr Dickie Alexander, contained in the annual report of the British Insurance Brokers Association of which he is chairman, must have a decidedly hollow ring in the ears of Signal Life investors. Gibraltar-based Signal

Life failed a year ago owing investors more than £6.5m. Signal Life bonds were sold in this country by inter-mediaries, many of whom were Registered Insurance Brokers and members of BIBA, and many of whom failed to point out to their clients the elementary fact that investments in offshore insurance companies would not be covered by the Policyholders Protection

One wonders what "evidence of expertise" these brokers produced before being allowed to register as an insurance broker. Investors in Signal Life's gold bond fund have been fully reimbursed by the fund's trustee, Hongkong and Shanghai Bank which acted with commendable speed in fulfilling its obligations to policybolders. But the gilt bond fund had no trustee - a point on which many investors were misinformed by their insurance broker - and these people have lost everything. For these unfortunates their only hope of compensation is to successfully sue their broker for negligence. Then, and only then, can the IBRC "grants" scheme come into operation, or the broker's professional indemnity insurance be acti-

Freeports' red herring

Freeports may or may not be a useful way to encourage economic growth in the United Kingdom but their case has not been helped by a study published yesterday by the Adam Smith Insti-Its booklet, published yesterday, discusses the case for and against freeports but the arguments both for and against are undermined by a case study of the freeport which was set up a few years ago in Miami and has subsequently flourished. The appraisal of the Miami experiment suffered in large part because of the resemblance it bears to the publicity handouts which the Miami authorities are all too eager to thrust into the hands of any who are willing to receive them. The lesson of Miami, which the Adam Smith Institute ought legitimately to have pointed out, is not that its freeport has been successful, but rather that if the conditions for growth exist then the freeport can act as a focus. In other words, Miami was ripe for growth anyway. It is the place where the developing Latin American economies meet the monies of the Carribean, and the wealth and power of the United With Washington looking south for the first time, Miami was bound to become more important, and the city is awash with cash

The same can not be said for Felixtowe, or Prestwick, or the airport at Aberdeen. All can make a strong case in British terms for having freeports status. But we have to decide what will work here, not what has worked in a different climate overseas.

High bank charges are driving away from the big four banks, into the arms of Co-operative Bank, Yorshire Bank and others

A survey by National Opinion Polls shows that Co-operative Bank is gaining customers at the expense of other banks. When it comes to switching accounts, Co-operative Bank is opening two-and-a-half times more new accounts than it loses. while the big four banks are all losing more customers than they Both Co-operative Bank and Yorkshire Bank are acquiring new customers from a relatively low base line with 602,000 and 663,000 customers respectively compared with Nat/Vest and Barclays, for example, which have more than five million çustomers each.

Co-operative is, however, in no doubt that free banking for customers, who keep their account in credit, is a big accretion. "When is comes to broking as with most things. people are looking for good service coupled with value for money", said Mr Terry Thomas, general manager of Co-operative Bank.

Play safe: keep the company's key operator under cover

The death or injury of a key executive can be just as devastating to a company as a fire or major loss of orders. But while companies scrupulously insure their executive's desk, only around 5 per cent bother to insure the top men themselves.

Statistically, a business can expect to be damaged by fire once every 275 years. By contrast a male over 45 has a one-in-four chance of dying before 65. No company would dream of operatig without fire cover, but all too many gamble with their human resources.

This narrow-mindedness can he disastrous, and the smaller the company, or partnership, the harder the loss of its driving force is going to hit,

With a weller of companies starting up. This is an area that should not be ignored.

Take a four-man computer software company. Staff consists of two boffins, a salesman and financial director. At first all goes well, the product sells, new ideas are in the pipeline and cash in the bank.

Suddenly, the salesman dies. Belatedly, the importance of his key role sinks in but the other knowledge of selling and the company slides down the wellworn slope to receivership.

Key-man insurance cover on each of the partners would have ensured a ready income until a replacement was appointed. Say the salesman had been 40 years old, the company could have hought £200.000 worth of cover for a premium of around £64 a month.

Though a neglected area of insurance a wide range of life policies is available Hambros, Hill Samuel. Commercial Union, Phoenix, Sun Life and the Prudential among others. NatWest Insurance in Bristol provides a useful brokerage and information service.

buying a death-in-sevice clause for their pension scheme.

First step in arranging key man cover is estimating the worth of your executive. One bench mark is 10 times the annual salary. But income is not necessarily an accurate pointer. John Housden, of Hill Samuel, recalls one company desperately trying to prevent an underpaid designer finding out the vast sums at which he was valued.

Mr Housden provides a more accurate calculation. If, for example, your high-flier earns £20.000, the company has a salary bill of £1.5m and annual profits of £4m and five-year cover is required the sum to be insured would be calculated as

20,000

Good news for at least two of the gilt bond fund. A quick Signal Life Gilt bondholders - telephone call would have they are the two investors who bought their gilt bonds through Chartered Insurance Services, a subsidiary of Standard Char-tered Bank Gibraltar-based Signal Life failed last year and investors in the gilt bond including the two who bought from Chartered Insurance Services have lost everything.

But Standard Chartered Bank confirmed yesterday that it is pursuing the matter with its professional indemnity insurers: and with only £20,000 at stake (each investor had a £10,000 bond) it is unthinkable that Standard Chartered would see its clients out of pocket if the claim against the insurer is

Mr John Hoddell, managing director of Chartered Trust, said: "Irrespective of the legal position and without prejudice to the legal rights of the company, we are investigating the position that bondholders find themselves in and we are looking very sympathetically at their claim."

This should strengthen SLIAG (Signal Life Investors Action Group) which is selecting test cases to bring court actions against the intermediaries who recommended the profit made. Basic rate tax has already been accounted for by the building society so a 45 per cent taxpayer will have a 15 per cent liability on the profits. But even taking this into account, a top rate taxpayer should still see a yield of more than 11 per cent. The appear of these schemes lies in the fact that the only risk one faces is that building society interest rates might decline. But if this happens, other interest rates will fall as well.

Royal Insurance offers con-

Thames Water has declined to comment beyond saying that the claim will be contested. Mr Vik Tausig, of Claim-

Adams has made scant progress from council. "If you take into in winning compensation for account the time Mr Adams spent taking the pictures and the studio time spent in processing them the cost of £25 per negative is not imreasonable", Mr Tausig adds. It is difficult to put a value on some of these negatives. "There are pictures of famous models, pop groups and a whole range of other pictures dating back years. In time, just one picture could be worth thousands of pounds." The Association of Fashion, Advertising and Editorial Photographers sympathises, saying there is not really much appropriate case law to draw Mr Mark Stephens, a solicitor who specializes in handling copyright cases, says there are three main considerations in trying to settle a case of this kind. First, there is the cost of replacing the damaged film and property. Second, there is the cost of reimbursing the photographer for the potentially huge revenue he could earn from exploiting the copyright. Third, the amount of compen sation could be assessed diffetently to take into account the cost of re-shooting a film.

All those concerned, it appears, would welcome some guidance from the courts on how cases of this kind should be judged and whether an old negative is worthless, or an irreplaceable work of art.

But for that they may have to wait for Mr Adams and Thames Water to argue their case in the High Court.

Here's an opportunity to join us in our bid to win the "Daily Telegraph" Unit Trust Managers' Competition, one of the highlights of the investment year.

Back in January, when Central Trustee Savings Bank, our Investment Managers, first entered the competition, they put their money on the TSB Extra Income. and TSB Pacific Unit Trusts as the combination most likely to win.

And we're sure everyone who invested with us then must be smiling now.

Because these two trusts in combination are not only riding high in the Competition, but they've also achieved a total growth of 30% since January 1stgetting on for half as much again as the average among the other contestants.

But we're not just looking to December 31st this year. Looking further ahead, our Investment Managers firmly believe these two trusts offer excellent prospects for income and growth in the medium to long

So we believe you should make our choice your choice too. Moreover, we are offering extra units to all investors who take advantage of today's opportunity, before September 2nd 1983.

Because our investment team's choice for the Competition still is 40% Extra Income and 60% Pacific, we suggest you back the same combination.

The important thing to do is to return your Application Form before Friday, September 2nd.

What makes Extra Income work so well?

Launched in November 1982, the TSB Extra Income Unit Trust has since become one of the most successful unit trusts in our group.

.With around £7 million invested in just nine months, Extra Income has, with income reinvested; achieved a capital growth of 35%. The current yield stands at 7.31%.

So, how will this trust perform in the future? Investing mainly in British equities, the trust concentrates on high vield 'recovery' stocks.

The Managers believe that, as the current upturn in world trade is sustained, those companies with slimmed down stocks and overheads should be able to produce dramatic improvements in their profits and dividends.

It is precisely this kind of company the Managers have looked for and invested in.

At present their choice includes major firms in the metals, engineering and financial sectors.

This kind of selection, which aims to improve our investors' income,' should also continue to provide good prospects for capital growth in future one for each Trust: For your guidance, the offer price for Accumulation Units in the TSB Extra Income Unit Trust on August 11th was 67.5p and the estimated gross yield was 7.31%. For Accumulation Units in the TSB Pacific Unit Trust the offer price on that day was 81.0p and the estimated gross yield was 0.49%. The Managers of the TSB Extra Income-Unit Trust and the TSB Pacific Unit Trust are TSB Unit Trusts Limited who are members of the Unit Trust Association. The Investment Managers are Central Trustee Savings Bank Limited and the Trustee is General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Consoration nic. Units in the Trusts may be bought and sold on any business day. Their prices and yields will be quoted in the Financial Times and may also be obtained from any branch of the TSB. The initial management charge is 5%, out of which remuneration is paid to qualified intermediaries. (Rates are available on request.) A monthly management charge of 1/16th of 1% (plus VAT) of the value of the You've always known the TSB as one of the big high street banks, but it may come as a surprise to learn that TSB. Unit Trusts are one of Britain's largest unit trust groups. Indeed, the funds we manage at present total over £100 million, spread across eight different unit trusts. These trusts include the followings—TSB American, TSB Extra Income, TSB General, TSB Gilt & Fixed Interest, TSB income, TSB International, TSB Pacific and TSB Selected Opportunities Unit Trusts.

What about the Pacific?

Investing primarily in Japan, with holdings in Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia and Australia, the TSB Pacific Unit Trust has always gone all out for long-term growth.

This policy has put this trust up in the top twenty of all trusts during the first seven months of this year. In Japan, where over two-thirds of the trust is invested, inflation is still being held at around 2%.

Moreover, the Managers expect the revival of world trade to produce a strong recovery in Japanese equities, and the country's trade surplus is growing strongly as world-wide export opportunities increase.

In short, the outlook there is excellent.

What does this combination offer?

Extra Income offers a consistently high level of income, with some capital growth, designed to protect the value of your investment. Reinvestment of the income will have the effect of substantially enhancing the overall growth. Pacific aims to achieve a high level

Bid talk echoes in Bowater forests

Like old soldiers, good rumours never die. For the better part of a decade the City has been entertained spasmodi cally by the notion that somecone, somewhere, wants to take over Bowater, the paper maker. This particular tale appears to be enjoying renewed сштепсу.

At the risk, however, of suggesting that there can be smoke without fire, the likelihood of a bid, or even of some party taking a sizable stake. seems small.

Close and nervous attention to the share register has not so far disclosed untoward movements, and, perhaps perversely, the very persistence of the rumour tends to induce more rather than less scepticism. Nor can anything definite be gleaned from the share price, as the

So what is the argument for a become a very expensive affair, possible bid? In general terms it To offfer only £4 a share would So what is the argument for a is that Bowater, sufferer from cost £644m, so even a partial huge assets and lowish profits, is recovering from the bottom of the cycle.

Pretax profits fell from £107m in 1982 to £72.6m for the 12 months to the end of March. They are expected slip further to about £60m this year after the cut in North American newsprint prices. But the recent restoration of that cut, combined with better trading conditions overall, could bring profits of £80m on 1984 and perhaps £30m more the following year. To some extent the recent strengthening of the share price to about 240p reflects these prospects and at 4.5 per cent the vicid takes earnings into account. What, of course, the share price still largely ignores is

Bowater's assets, Its million acres, not to mention the paper mills, are worth up to £10 a

For precisely that reason, however, a bid could suddenly raid needs plenty of cash. On top of that Bowater has high cost paper mills in Newfoundland and Britain which would take a lot of money to modify or to close.

If someone wants to enter the pulp and paper business there are cheaper purchases in America. But the rumour will doubtless march on.

Reinsurance

The disaster which struck the Spanish tanker, Castilo de Bellver, off South Africa last week may be one of the last nails in the coffin of the cutprice re-insurnace merchants which have dogged the marine

Claims of more than £50m

on the ship are likely. The hull is insured for £10m, the cargo for £36m and pollution has yet to be ascertained. The claims will probably come to rest in hard-pressed Bermuda and fringe world re-insurance mar-kets like Brazil

In normal times a £50m claim would be peanuts. But at this point in the underwriting cycle. re-insurers in Bermuda in particular could find they are suffering from severe cash flow problems. The Bermudan companies are feeling the draught as interest rates fall, together with swiftly rising underwriting losses.

In the long-term, the disap-pearance of cheap re-insurance should be beneficial by pushing up marine rates, and not before

But short-term, insurers who have re-insured risks in what now look like dubious markets could find themselves nursing some bad debts.

Mr John Ginarlis, Quilter Goodison's insurance specialist, said recently that there are BOWATER SHARE PRICE rumours surrounding other conservative approach well-known re-insurers.

The most important compopents of the Bermudan industry are the captive companies established by the multinationals for cheap insurance with tax benefits. But premium rates in the conventional insurance industry are now highly com-petitive, Bermudan costs have increased, and United States and British taxmen are challenging the tax benefits. The big worry in Bermuda is whether multinational oil companies will stand by the captives as underwriting losses increase and reserve inadequacies are revealed which far surpass the original investment in the captive, Mr Ginarlis says.

The big insurance brokers say they are becoming more selective in their choice of security; that is, placing business with the US and United Kingdom composite insurers at the expense of the fringe markets like Bermuda where premium income must deteriorate.

Most of the profit increase came from existing products in Britain. Demand for the full range - from kitchen knives to electric coffee percolators - has been firm, helped in part by the extraordinary resilient consumer boom. Overseas markets while still profitable, have no: been so buoyant.

But Prestige has also ben-efited from determined anempts to improve efficiency and widen margins. Higher productivity, partly achieved by the time-honoured device of sack-ing workers, will stand the company in good stead when it launches some new products in the second half of the year. These products are expected to include some of the more profitable electric gadgets.

The true strength of the company, however, can be seen in its financial position. While so many British companies are still labouring under high gearing. Prestige is a net earner of interest. Its powerful cash flow means that after paying out some £7m for the extraordinary dividend the company could still have more cash at the end of the year than at the end of 1982.

Given its conservative approach. Prestige is most unlikely to expand outside its traditional business. But that, of course, does not rule out an acquisition.

The share price jumped 41p to 189p, but with profits of more than £7m in sight for the whole year, that seems to leave holders a generous extraordi- room for growth.

Hingsen snatched irritably, with reason, at his track suit as the jury of 50,000 umbrellas peered at him with that knowing impassive stare.

After the heatwave, we had woken to low, grey, dense skies, yet the stadium was almost full and the rain just starting as the decathlon men slotted into their blocks for the 100 metres, while breakfast was still being served in the posh hotels. The seeded fast men got down: Hingsen, jumpy, false-started. Doubts about Thompson's fitness, eased as he came down the red ribbon of track looking tense but full of that customary bounding power. A time of 10.60sec, three metres up on Hingsen, was only nine hundredths outside his best and Hingsen must have been disappointed with 10.95sec, well been disappointed with 10.95sec, well down on his.

Over to the long jump pit, where both men excel. On his first attempt Thompson no-jumps, frowns, and walks back with a shrug which says "don't worry, I'm all right". Hingsen manages 7.75m, but Thompson's second off a fine rhythmic run, is

Japan imports shock for UK

British exports to Japan were worth only 58.2 per cent of their year, a study from the Japanese Finance Ministry claims.

The ministry, working on its own import statistics for the year ending in March, says only oil-supplying Kuwait did worse, with 36.8 per cent.

The claim staggered British specialists. Mr David Morris, an economist with the Londonbased Anglo-Japanese Economic Institute, said yesterday: "We went back to inquire whether it was a printing error. but they said it was correct". Japanese officials used US dollars for their comparison, and movements against the yen were thought partially respon-sible for declines by most

A marathon wait

The long wait for the British men The long wait for the British men marathon runners is over and the long ran begins tomorrow, Pat Butcher writes. British officials should not have brought Hugh Jones, Mike Gratton and Gerry Helme out here at least four days before it was necessary, their excuse being that the air flights (and fares) had already been arranged. Both Jones and Gratton had specifically requested a late arrival, for they are requested a late arrival, for they are particularly aware that their partnerparticularly aware that their partner-ship with Helme forms the best British marathon trio to come to a major championship in the last 10 confidence increased. Cook's success made it a good day for cricket, not only for England. The extent to which modern captains believe, if they possibly can, that fast and medium-paced bowling are the answer to every contingency is shown in the fact that, although Gray was brought into the New Zealand side partly because of his orthodox left-arm spin, he bowled not a single over during England's innings.

So far, except during Cook's two spells, all the bowling has been done at medium pace of above, the ball banged in often pointlessly short. Last night, when Willis came back for a last over, five of the six balls he bowled never remotely threatened the stumps. They were all far too short for that. It has been a game, therefore, played in the England's first innings total, with New Zealand having to bat last, is already looking good and better by far than when New Zealand, with less than a hour to go, had reached 147 for two. There are mutterings, as there usually are at Lord's, of a ridge at the Nursery End. For New Zealand, for one reason and another, it is going to be a difficult game to save.

Yesterday was hard fought and slow going. Cook gave it balance. The gates were closed at noon, a rare occurrence in this country against New Zealand. It is a compliment to Howarth's side that the crowd became as involved, or nearly so, as if Australia had been playing. This, they have de-cided, is a match to be won. New Zealand have done enough damage to our rugby payers this summer without beating the cricketers, too.

England lost their last five wickets for 47 runs in 20 overs. Of their batsmen left from overnight, only Gatting could have given the New Zealanders anything much to worry about, and he was out in the fourth over attempting, far too soon, to hook Hadlee. In all the circumstances it was a poor stroke, not least because Hadlee, even off his short run, is an awkward bowier to hook.

In attempting this stroke, Gatting got his percentages wrong. Having played so well on Thursday evening, he should have gone on now to make a hundred. Once he was out, at 288, the rest of the morning's play was dull. At 2990 Taylor had his off stump removed by Hadlee; at 303 Foster was was dull. At 2990 Taylor caught at the wicket; at 318 Smith, the wicket-keeper, made a very good diving catch to send back Willis; and at 326 Cook was bowled by Charfield.

Although Fosteer and Cook showed they can bat a bit. England's is the sort of tail that may be made to look quite impossibly long against West Indies next summer. Taylor has a career average of 16, Cook of

Cook's tour de force: his first wicket for England on his way to four for 28

For the lifteenth time in 43 Tests Hadlee took five wickets in an innings. He is a prime example of the hostility that can be achieved even late in a fast bowler's career, through rhythm, timing and an action that has never been allowed to get sloppy. Howarth had half an hour's batting before lunch, in which

Foster bowled his first perfectly presentable overs in Test cricket. Foster has, by the way, a fine arm from the boundary. The afternoon began with Edgar, then five, being dropped at second slip off Willis, a low chance to Botham, and Wright being caught in the gully off a vile, lifting ball, also from Willis. This one from Willis an indication of how frangible

Howarth was iin for 50 minutes, playing well. When, at 49. Cook bowled Howarth, Edgar had made 10 in 26 overs. It made a nice, comforting start for Cook. If his movement looked a little stiff, nerves could have had something to do with that. By the end of play his was easier. Poor Edmonds, he must have watched it all, if he did, with mixed

For New Zealand's third wicket, Edgar and Crowe made 98. Crowe is a composed 20year-old with so far a disappointing record in Tests. His best strokes yesterday were off the back foot, square of the wicket on the off side. Edgar took a chunk out of the pitch, just grafted on, playing always within his limitations. At 147 for two New Zealand were doing well. At 159 for four they

First Crowe was bowled by Botham, playing round a ball of full length. This was a flash of the old or rather the younger, Botham. Three overs later Cook, coming back for his second spell, at once had Edgar caught at mid-on, driving too

There were then 15 overs left. In the tenth of these Cook bowled Coney, playing back when he probably should have been forward, and had Bracewell caught at silly point off bat and pad. To get back into the game today New Zealand will be looking to Hadlee again, one of the few cricketers about who might be capable of doing it.

It was a comprehensive defeat for the championship leaders, whose batting has long been seen as a potential Achilles' heel. On this occasion, they were found wanting for the second time in the match. The chief exception was Dowton, now a far more accomplished wicketkeeper than in his England days, and he batted as well yesterday as I have ever seen him. He defended sensibly and hit the ball cleanly when it was over-pitched. Ellis, too, was much less neurotic than his colleagues, who appeared quite unable to come to terms with a pitch which offered increasing turn as the game wore on. It was a comprehensive defeat for Significantly, Williams opened the bowling from one end. For 45 minutes Radley and Slack pro-gressed steadily, but when they had added 30 to the overnight total of 44, Williams dismissed Radley with one which bit rather more sharply to provide a straightforward catch to rward short leg. With 36 runs still needed for the lead, this was a setback Middlesex could have done without, and it took on a more serious complexion in the next over. Kapil Dev, whose knee injury restricted him to medium pace, removed Slack in one of the few spells by a seam bowler in the Middlesex innings, and exposed their fragile middle order to an ardrous task.

They were not up to it as Cook roused his three spanners tellfully, never allowing the batamen to setie. Steele took the next wicket as Stelle took the next wicket as Middlesex compounded their own problems by becoming totally introverted. Emburey stayed 12 overs without scoring before playing a dramatically bad stroke to the first ball of Willey's first over of the day, heaving across the line to be bowled off his pads. Middlesex had lost four wickets for 19 runs.

wickets for 19 runs. That brought in Downton to join Ellis with 16 runs still accound for the lead - or, put pessimistically, to avoid an innings defeat - and for the first time since the opening overs, but met ball on equal terms as the two wrested some, if not all; the initiative away from the bowlers.

Half an hour after lunch Willey ended the stand, beating Ellis's forward stroke, and although Neil Williams weighed in with some healthy blows, it became only a matter of time as the spinners worked their way through the lower rotter.

THE CRICKETER CUP FINAL

Village airlift to Troon Ellis holds key to cup

The outcome of the Cricketer

The outcome of the Cricketer Cup final, to be played at Burton Court, Chelsea, tomorrow could well depend upon whether Richard Ellis, the Middlesex batsman, is available to play for Haileybury Hermits. Ellis, the outstanding cricketer from the two sides, Haileybury and Repton Pilgrims, will probably not know until tomorrow morning if he will be needed by his county for their John Piayer league match.

Player league match.
Otherwise, Haileybury and Repton are well matched. Repton, who won the first final in 1967 – the competition, sponsored by Moet & Chandon, was devised for public schools old boys - include Richard Hutton, now a banker and aged 40, but still a useful cricketer, and John Carr, also of Middlesex, if he too is not needed at Old Trafford. Haileybury, who beat the strong Charterhouse side in the semi-finals-have reached the final for the first time. Apart from Ellis, they include Miller, an Oxford Blue who has had Miller, an Oxford Blue who has had a good year in the Parks. Batting is indeed their strong point.

Sir Anthony Tuke, President of MCC, will present the Moet & Chandon award on this delightful ground with its short boundaries. The prize for the winners is a day trip to Epernay, courtesy of the spoasors.

GOLF Flair and fluster for joint leaders

From Lawine Mair, Dublia

When Severiano Ballesteros came in with a second successive 67 to share the lead with Bernhard Langer at the half-way stage of the Carrolls Irish Open at Royal Dublin he was told how the ball he uses - a Trileist tour 384 - will not be allowed on The European tour after this week.

Ballesteros chuckled at a news paper item which not only pointed out that the ball "stayed airborne longer than the rules permit" but further suggested that it had won more than its fair share of tournaments in the United States in fact 11, including the Masters, the US Open and the PGA. "Okay", said the Spaniard "Olay", said the Spaniard pointing to one notoriously erratic golfer among the press corps. "I will give you one of these balls and we'll see if you can win a major".

He said that a switch of ball would make no difference to him whatsoever. His reference to the fact that he could "play with a stone" was meant to be a joke, but, of course he was a dab hand at knocking pebbles around in his days knocking pebbles around in his days as a caddie. Ballesteros was playing yesterday alongside Mark James, a man whose problems in taking the club away on the backswing merely served to emphasise the Spaniard's flair.

emphasise the Spaniard's flair.
Out in 32, against the par of 35, Ballesteros drew level with Langer, the first-round leader, when he caught the green at the 270-yard 16th with his one-iron and got down in two putts for his birdie. In his round of 64 on Thursday, Langer hit so many of his irons directly at the flase, but westerday found himself flag, but yesterday found himself knocking them first right and then left.

He could not make up his mind what he was doing wrong, but was glad that his early starting time had left him with plenty of time in which to get things right. Last seen, he had a whole hag of practice halls emptied out on the putting green - a sideshow which, in view of his troubles on the greens, almost inevitably drew a gathering of ghouls.

Though Graham Marsh took three putts at the last, the way in which he has arrived on the lea board is worthy of note. Four over par for his first nine holes of this championship, Marsh was 11 under par for his last 27 holes.

Cecil-Piggott double act steals the show

By Michael Phillips, Racing Corresponden

Henry Cecil and Lester Piggott were on a crest at Newbury yesterday when they joined forces to win both the Hungerford Stakes and the Washington Singer Stakes, the two main races at stake there with Salieri and Trojan Fen. Bouncing back into the sort of form that saw him finish second to Gorytus at York last summer and then win the Mill Reef Stakes at Newbury, Salieri won the Hungerford Stakes decisively by two and a half lengths from the 1,000 Guineas runner-up, Royal

The bitter disappointment of the race was the hot favourite. Horage, who finished down the field after leading for about five furloogs. He was always on the wrong leg and not the same horse that I rode to win at Royal Ascot" was a disappointed Steve Cauthen's explanation afterwards.

While Horage was beating a loot forward for the first time this season. He came sweeping through his field in the straight to win with the minimum of fuss. Afterwards Ceril had no firm plans for the winner, but he did say that Diesis who has always been regarded as his superior at home could begin his comeback proper in the Kiverton Park Stakes at Doncaster month.

Less good news of their stable companion, Dunheith, though. The horse, who won both the Royal Lodge Stakes and the William Hill Futerity last year and was on the strength of those victories once favourite for this year's Derby will not race again. Cecil said yesterday that he will soon go to the United States and eventually take up stallion duties there. Ironically his announcement came on the very day that Dunbeath's half signer, Khwlah, made a acuccessful start to her career by winning the Sparsholt

Stakes. Trojan Fen duely kept his unbeaten record intact when he won the Washington Singer Stakes to the understandable delight of not only his trainer but also his wife, Inlie. That supremely accomplished horsewoman has ridden Trojan Fen day in and day our at Newmarket ever since he was broken and thereby helped to make him.

The ease with which Trojan Fen put paid to his three rivals yesterday put paid to his three rivals yesterday simply underlined Cool's strength in that department even though Milbow was beaten at Netwcastle earlier in the week. Defecting Dancer (Prix Morny), Precocious (Gimèrack Stakes), Prickle (Lowther Stakes), and Vacarine (Mill Reef Stakes) were the plans that Cecil outlined for his other leading two-year-olds yesterday.

Otherwise the afternoon belonged to Pat Eddery who rode z double on Prego and Dancing Affair. Eddery's handling of Prego in the Esal Cree handing of Prego in the risal Cream handings was arguably the coolest bit of race riding seen all season. "I told him to ride Prego like a non trier and he carried out my instructions to the letter," was the Barry Hills's compliment to Eddery afterwards.

Cauthen did not ride Prego because Eddery was engaged when it appeared that he would not be able to do the weight at the four day forfeit singe. Cauthen said during the afternoon that he had appealed to the disciplinary streams of the Jockey Club against that eight-day suspension imposed upon him by the local streams at Salisbury on YAWA and Castle Rising two likely contenders for this year's St likely contenders for this year's St Leger, will meet for the second time this season in the Geoffrey Freer Stakes at Newbury today. The first occasion was in the Grand Prix de Paris at Longchamp towards the end of June when Yawa won to give Geoff Lewis his greatest success as a trainer. Castle Rising finished only fourth.

The distance between them was four lengths and it would have been even further had not Yawa swerved violently and lost ground as he took the lead. Neither has run in the meantime. Castle Rising has an 8th pull in the weights this afternoon and that could easily give him the and that could easily give him the edge now, especially as it is common knowledge that Yawa developed a skin rash towards the end of July and had to miss a few days exercise as a result.

Yawa is distinctly idle at home and that would have set him had a

At Doncaster Yawa and Castle Rising will have only members of their own age to contend with; today they have their elders as well and there is ground for thinking that neither of them will be able to cope with Khairpour on these terms.

Khairpour was deemed good enough to take his chance in the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Diamond Stakes at Ascot

As the only beat to finish the day without a disabling equipment failure, Australia II continued to show the dominance that has made her the favourite to. The results gave Australia II and Victory '83 one point each. The four boats in the semi-finals started with a clean slate after three round-robins, which ended with Australia fit enough to compete in Sanday's cross-country phase. It has been an unlucky year for Miss Strawson, whose two advanced horses, Sparrowhawk and Minsmore, were riders representing Britain in the European championships in Switzerland next week, there will be no shortage of competition. Among the young riders those likely to be in

IN BRIEF

Edmonton, Canada (AP) - British golfers took advantage of Marlene Streit's putting problems and Mary Ann Hayward's erratic wood to defeat Canada 4-2 on the opening day of the Commonwealth women's golf championship.

Louise Briers sank a final, five-foot put to halve her match and give Australia a narrow 3½-2½ winsower New Zealand. The countries dropped from the calendar last year through lack of sponsorship, the Masters Championship returns to Britain from October 12-15, when it will be staged at the Spectrum Arena, Warrington. CRICKET: The Australian Cricket Board found yesterday that Jeff Thomson did not breach the players code of behaviour during a television interview in late June. After watching videotapes of the interview, made soon after Thomson returned from the Prudential World Cup in England, the board coordinator, Bob Merri-man, said Thomson made no comment detrimental to the game, to the tour or the touring party.

EQUESTRIANISM

Final try at Locko By Jenny MacArthur

Ginny Strawson, the champion roung rider of Europe, is still ecovering from a fall she suffered a fermight ago, and is likely to miss the cross-country phase of the Midland Bank horse trials championships of Britain, which pegin today at Locko Park in Derbyshire, the home of Captain Patrick Dritry-Lowe.

Locko, the richest event of its kind in Britain (the first prize is £1,000), is the final trial for the riders hoping to make the team of six for the European Young Riders' championships, which take place at championships, which take place at Burghley from September 7 to 11.

Miss Strawson dislocated her shoulder when she fell from a young horse, and although she is mending rapidly, it is unlikely that she will be fit enough to counter in Synday's both unable to compene at Badminton Sparrowhawk cracked a hip joint when rolling in the stable and Minsmore, on whom Miss Strawson became the European champion, has had a splint. However, Miss Strawson had a good rioweer, whis straward had a good outing with both of them at Holker Hall just before her fall, and all being well, she will take them to Castle Ashby next week.

Although Locko is without the six

European champion, and Anne-Marie Taylor with Gin And Orange. British riders filled four of the first five places at the Falsterbo three-day event in Sweden. The winner was Richard Walker, riding Mrs Birchall's Globetrotter, and he also took fifth place on Mr Birchall's Accumulator. It was a well deserved result for Walker, who has had his fair share of bad luck this season he misses today's horse trials at Locko Park because his two advanced horses, Ryan's Son and Waterburn are injured.

Captain Mark Phillips had a successful outing on the Range Rover Team's Blizzard II so finish third, with Clarissa Strachan on Martin Superior and Incompany of the Research of of the Rese Errors hit Canada

Modern athletics: the mysteries and the manipulations

Blood and intrigue on the tracks

Those of us who had thought that athletics is the one pure and simple sport most gentle of gentlemen, hurdling fallen race as him, while Coe and Ovett have a less and policy of reversions of reversions of reversions. chucking odd bit of metal further than the other chaps, cannot have failed to notice that athletics has come of age this season. Money, readily comprehensible nastiness, and utterly bailling jargon now rule.

Which reminds me: you must understand that I do not intend to write at my hest today, for I am on a scientifically devised schedule which will enable me to peak in time to write an absolute blinder on the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe in the

This, by the way, is a horse race, and, as such celebrated gentlemen as Piggott, Cauthen, Carson and Cook could all tell you, if you are considered to have transgressed the rules of racing by interfering, however unfortunately, with the other runners, then the weight of the law falls upon you.

But all these win-hungry jockeys would be considered absolute angels, almost as angelic as Britain's own Saint Sebastian. that long-time sufferer from the arrows of outrageous fortune, were they to employ similar factics to those that brought about their recent suspensions in the sport of foot racing. Running has become so, ah, competitive that up-to-date coaching films will have to be marketed as video nasties.

full of blood, a veritable emblem of athletics today, for all that he is a man who knows in his heart that in such cases it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Anid that brings us to the tale of Nick Rose; Oh Rose, thou art sick as a parrot after the Helsinki final of the 10,000 metres, a race he described as a dog fight. "It was that so and so Kedir," he is reported to have said, rather temperately I thought, afterwards. "At one stage I raised my fist at him and swore".

When athletics is not about blood-en-crusted spikes and men with elbow-likefire it is concerned with incomprehensible ailments. Athlete after athlete reports such problems as wrenched fellocks, bruised stifles, and poor old Seb seems to have been bitten by a lymph. For my money, the athletics picture of the year is of Ovett yanking his shorts up round his waist in order to investigate his latest injury:

At one time the point of athletics was to settle the argument about who is the best: now the sport is a contest to discover who can juggle his schedule the best, so as to compete in the maximum number of races without coming across anyone who might beat him. Cram yelped with public anguish and told us how wrong it was for appearing on the same track at the same

There has to be a logical reason for this curious state of affairs, in which our prime stock is never seriously tested against itself. We all know that there is now money to be earned in athletics, but mere cash for running cannot be the whole story. Take Golden Fleece.

Golden Fleece won the Derby in 1982 and there and then, at the tender age of three, his racing career ended. Never again did he risk getting beaten. Were his connexions simply content with the prize money they had collected from the Derby? Reader, they were not. Prize money is but loose change compared to the money that can be earned once a racing career is over.

Why then sould our leading athletes risk running against each other, when there is so much hope for the future at stake? For cash earned by running must be a mere pleasant bonus to collect along the way, when you consider the earnings potential of our brave boys when their running days are over. Just think what they would be able to earn at stud.

In their Lordships judgment regulation 6 should not be construed without regard to the intended use of the food. The regulation applied only to food intended for sale for human consumption. That was a penal regulation which should be consumed in the consumed in the consumer than the construction of the constructi penal regulation which should be construed restrictively and it seemed that "unfitness-for human consumption". "unsoundness" and "unwholesomeness" should be judged in the context of the specified use intended.

in the present case it was not disputed that the dates were intended for use as a ingredient in The real issue, which was never brought to the attention of the magnistrate, arose out of the fact that food might be unwholesome in the context of the untreated use but wholesome provided that it was thereafter treated. Alternatively it might be wholesome or unwholesome in the context of brown sauce because the point was never us all normal contexts. brown sauce because the point was never clearly put to him. He erred in Southampton.

It would however be open to the local authority to bring the dates once more before the magistrate or another magistrate with a view to Should the local authority do so, the magistrate concerned would have to consider whether those dates were unwholesome in the context of the admitted intended use, namely as an ingredient in the manufacture of brown sauce. If they were unwholesome in that context, it would be his duty to condemn the dates and make a destruction order.

If they were not unwholesome in that context, it would be his duty to refuse to make such an order. Lord Justice Oliver delivered a concurring judgment and Lord Justice Watkins agreed. Solicitors: Thomas Cooper &

Waterford v Cork and the fear of Sodom v Gomorrah

Unbridgable gap: Waterford, the Cinderella city with the political muscle, and Cork (right) with faith in its facilities, but where alarm bells are ringing.

Clash of two cities as oil fever grips Ireland

From Tim Jones Cork

A tale of two cities threatens to crupt into the Irish political arena as oil fever grows uncontrollably in the republic. The battle revolves around SEDCO 704, the oil rig which arrived off the Waterford coast last April. It costs £130 a second to operate and stands in 250it of water far over the

Few Irish people have seen the rig, but all are following its progress with obsessive interest - for it holds out the glittering prospect of making the country self-sufficient in petroleum

Ireland currently spends Sibu (£676m) on all imports so the rig and others to follow could transform the besieged economy.

Government attempts to dampen wild speculation with warnings that it will not be known for months whether there is enough oil to be commercially viable have been

Frantic scenes on the Doblin Stock Exchange were sustained by reports that workers on the rig "danced a jig of joy" after a test drilling last week indicated a flow rate of 6,467 barrels of

But even wilder scenes are predicted on the political front when local councils meet next month after the summer recess. For e "great Irish oil boom" has become a war between two cities determined to follow in the footsteps of Aberdeen. Although not a drop of oil will come ashore for at least four years. Cork and Waterford and commercial interests to ensure that it comes to them. The rig operated by Gulf Oil equidistant from Cork, Ireland's second city, and Waterford, known as the "Cinderella City" because of the terrible economic hammering it has experienced in the have begun mobilizing political

Cork believes that it has the herter facilities to handle any nil rush because it is used to service $35 rig supply ships and has a helicopter base, but the political muscle appears to rest in Waterford.

For the first time it is represented by two government ministers, Mr Austin Deasy, Minister for Agriculture and Mr Eddie Collins, Minister of State at the Department of Industry and Energy.

Ten words uttered by Mr
Collins this week set the siarm bells ringing in Cork: "Hopefully it will be brought ashore on th Waterford coastline."

Waterford is ploughing a separate but parallel furrow and Mr Desmond O'Toole. president of the local chamber of commerce, said that it was considering appointing a professional manager to coordinate the city's claims.

The mayor of Waterford, Mr Richard Jones, said: "The town has seen nothing but factory run-downs for years and young unemployed people find it hard to believe there is a future for His opposite number, the Lord Mayor of Cork, Mr John Denneby, said: "My city can justify its claims on strictly commercial grounds.

Helping him counter the claims of the Waterford politicians will be Mr Peter Barry,

Mr Denneby's talk of "political muscle" could be the harbinger of bitter battles in the Cabinet and on the floor of the Dail. For ever since Fine Gael, the ruling party, wrested control of the Cork area it has faced mounting criticism over job losses.

But Mr Jones was worried that an oil rush could affect the peace and tranquility of the town, "I know that in England oil developments led to scenes out of Sodom and Gomorrah because whenever the stuff is found the black ladies of the night tend to follow. We must be on our guard ot ensure that does not happen.

"England seems to be dissipating its oil wealth on sustaining unemployment, whereas we would be fighting for it to be used to create new iobs and to improve services." It is unlikely that any major oil find will bring the kind of Growth has been remarkably where gardeners have been able to water adequately. Runner beans have now reached the top of the supports and the growing shoot should be pinched out. Onions are ready for lifting now in most parts.

Finish hedge trimming soon and clear all weeds and debris from hegde bottoms where they provide snug cover for snails and slugs.

Trim the more vigorous rock garden plants if they are likely to swamp their neighbours; also car back or prop up any herbaceous or annual plants that are flopping on to a lawn. If left only for a few weeks they will cause a bare patch.

Sow spring cabbages, also a short row of carrots and lettuces to give a Cut out raspberry canes as soon as they have finished fruiting and tie in new canes to take their place. RH
